Mr. Jenkins, as editor of one of the state's leading dailies is recognized as one of the Oregon's foremost editorial writers. As a newspaper man he is peculiarity fitted to tell us how to keep business from going to his city. Having recently completed an extensive trip through the East, he has equipped himself to tell what the other half of the world is not doing.

DAILY MARKET REPORT

(Oregon Journal Market Review)

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 24. — Cold weather may cause a temporary halt in the declining prices on eggs, but the trade in general is not inclined to look for any serious advance.

Market for eggs at this time is a weather affair and values will advance or recede with climatic changes. A protracted period of cold weather would have the effect of decreasing arrivals and creating a better demand for fresh offerings.

Cold storage holdings are being rapidly decreased and, while the fresh egg market may advance at this time, holders of the ice house goods are too anxious to get go to hold back their stock from the trade or demand a higher price.

Receipts of eggs recently have been more than sufficient to take care of offerings and considerable stock has been moved into ice houses. This will be withdrawn and sold as fresh goods.

Turkey Outlook Very Firm

Very firm outlook for the immediate future is indicated for turkeys, with practically everything cleaned up here. Even the stock held in storage was grabbed by anxious buyers who paid extreme prices for their needs. It was the grandest cleanup the wholesale and retail trade has known.

Veal Shortage Quite Serious

Rather serious shortage of veal is indicated in the wholesale trade for the week's opening with liberal demand and few offerings. Prices nominally placed around 18c for best. Hogs nominally unchanged.

May a Dark-haired Man Visit You

"Take out and take in,
Bad luck is sure to begin.
But, take in and take out,
Good luck will come about."

Thus ran the law governing New Years Eve in merry Old England. At midnight all the doors and windows were thrown open amid many shouts of welcome to the New Year. Then the whole family hovered about to watch their luck come in. If a woman or blond man chanced to be the first visitor, bad luck was theirs for a year. If a dark man entered bearing a gift good luck had come to stay. Empty handed, even the darkest brunett brought bad luck with him.

May a swarthy, dark-haired man bearing a gift be the first to cross your threshold New Year's morning.
