

RABBIT CLUB ORGANIZED

H. W. REYNOLDS IS ELECTED PRESIDENT

Affiliation With American Association Planned; County Club Work Praised

Organization of the Lane County Rabbit and Cavy club was perfected at a meeting of prospective members held in the chamber of commerce yesterday when the principal order of business was the election of officers and appointment of committees on constitution and by-laws.

Representatives of several different communities of the county were in attendance at the meeting, the feature of which was the favorable attitude expressed toward the continuance and extension of the county club work under A. D. Collier.

H. W. Reynolds of Eugene, who was instrumental in the movement to organize the local club, was elected president and B. B. Murdoch of Junction City, vice-president. Mr. Collier was elected secretary-treasurer. On the board of directors are B. T. Fairchild of Springfield; Virgil Roland of Eugene and Mrs. C. F. Rutherford of Motoc route B.

The president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer were selected as a committee to act in connection with county and state fairs, and the directors will draw up a constitution and by-laws for the club.

Eighteen members were on the roll yesterday, those present at the meeting being as follows: F. D. Thompson, Springfield; L. H. Bain, Motoc route A; J. B. Chapman, Motoc route A; John Allen, Vidar; B. T. Fairchild, Springfield; R. B. Murdoch, Junction City; Virgil Roland, Eugene; Mrs. C. F. Rutherford, Motoc route B; H. W. Reynolds, Eugene; and A. D. Collier, Eugene.

The next meeting of the club will be held in about a month, the exact date not being determined yesterday, but was left at the discretion of the president and the directors. Plans for the future include application for affiliation with the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association.

PLEDGE WORK TO GROW MANY BOYS IN COUNTY SEEK SCHAFF OFFER

W. A. Elkins plans entering the communities of Springfield and Pleasant Hill with offers to boys who may wish to accept the pledge of the Leopold Schaff foundation, he said yesterday.

This work will follow completion of the program in Eugene. Thirty boys here have sought application forms and have stood ready to take a pledge to abstain from gambling, drink and other tools of vice.

Letters are going out from Mr. Elkins' office here, telling those who have applied through him what they must do to enroll with the foundation. As soon as he has reached all of these boys he will take up the work in Springfield and Pleasant Hill, and it is his intention, if permitted, later to extend the offer to other parts of the county.

Mr. Keeney won 20 ribbons on his flock besides a special cup. One of his birds beat the one that won the grand championship at the big Tacoma show recently, his bird taking first and second premiums over this one.

Mr. Keeney also won the premium for having the best displays of dark and light Barred Rocks.

Prospects of Flax Industry in Oregon Discussed

Extension of Acreage Will Depend Wholly Upon Market. Created by Mills, Says State Market Agent.

Many requests for information and advice regarding the new flax industry of the Willamette valley came to the state market agent department, and C. E. Spence says he has had to go to the growers themselves for much of the information they ask his department for.

The information most of the growers ask for is will they be warranted in going into flax growing as a major crop; what the price outlook is, and if the two new flax mills will be able to take the production if farmers generally go into flax raising? As partially answering these inquiries, Mr. Spence quotes a farmer of Polk county who has for ten years experimented with flax growing, and who is well informed on all phases of the industry:

"I believe that eventually flax production and manufacture will be leading industries for the Willamette valley, but just now a prediction as to how soon this will come would be little more than guesswork."

"There seems to be considerable misunderstanding about the matter in some ways, and many farmers are under the impression that the two new flax mills will take all the flax from the farms and work it into the various products in their factories."

"So I understand, these linen mills will not buy a flax from the farmers, but will depend on the flax mill at the penitentiary for their material, after the prison factory has worked the raw flax into the various forms wanted by the mills. The linen mills will then go on with its further manufacture into many different products."

"So it appears to me that at the present time the success of flax growing depends very largely on the mill at the state prison and the success and enlargement of that plant. There is no doubt, but I have doubts about the state buying all the flax the state will grow, for the reason that the prison plant has its limits, and when that is reached it will have to enlarge and increase its output or private capital will have to put in like plants. One drawback is the slow process of retting and drying and the big investment of money tied up in large stocks during the slow process."

One of the stockholders of the Miles Linen mill at Salem, just completed, stated surveys show that 200,000 acres in the Willamette valley are adapted to flax growing; that only about 4000 acres were grown in 1925, and that the state contracted for about 2500 acres. Asked what he thought of farmers going in for increased production, he replied:

"I have not gone into the matter very far beyond the needs of our own plant. Our mill manufactures fishnet, twine and net fabrics, and we get our material from the prison plant after they work it up for us, ready for use. Whether the prison plant will be enlarged to meet increased production, or whether others will put in like plants, I do not know, but certainly this part of the industry must be taken care of if we are to make the flax a leading industry of the valley. I would not have the raw material work into shape for them. I have been told that the prison plant has about reached its capacity."

WOOL INTEREST BROAD

FOREIGN PRICE SITUATION SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

(By The Associated Press) BOSTON, Jan. 9.—The Commercial Bulletin today says: "A broadening interest in wool is apparent on the part of the manufacturers who evidently have must some orders against which they presently think well of wool on its present price level. While there is no general advance in wool values in the local market this week there is a very evident hardening tendency in values, despite the efforts of manufacturers to depress them, or at least to prevent them from rising."

"Little new is heard from the west, dealers and growers being more or less deadlocked at the moment."

Light on Biblical Authorship. An Egyptian tomb in western Thebes. It is said, has furnished evidence that the writer of the Book of Proverbs is indebted for some of his passages to an Egyptian named Amenemope, who, according to records, lived hundreds of years earlier than the Bible author. A comparison of the two passages referred to follows that of Proverbs 1: "Incline thy ears and hear the words of wisdom and apply thy breast to my knowledge. For it is pleasant if thou keep them in thy breast; if they are ready, all of them on thy tongue."

"Incline thy ears and hear my words and apply thy heart thereto to understand them. Good is it if thou dost set them in thy breast, but woe to him who transgresses them. Let them rest in thy breast, that they may be a key to thy heart. So may they be the key to thy tongue."—Family Herald.

"I had scalp trouble for a long time. Pimples broke out and itched and burned something awful, causing me to scratch. Scratching caused eruptions, and my hair became lifeless and fell out. I could not rest at night."

"I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in less than a week the pimples began to leave. I continued using them and I was completely healed, after using two boxes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Ointment." (Signed) J. P. Ocho, Lancaster, Wash., Aug. 17, 1925.

BUY IT AT THE DRUG STORE

Your Druggist is More Than a Merchant

First to open in the morning, last to close at night, your druggist maintains a health service station for your community. He is the man you call on for quick service when there is sickness or accident in your home. He keeps on hand the hundreds of little items that relieve suffering and safeguard health. Back of the doctor and the hospital is the drug store—a base of supplies, a service station for health.

But your druggist could not stay in business if he only filled prescriptions. That part of his business is less than 10 per cent of the total. So the modern druggist carries a multitude of related articles in order to round out his business and in order that he may operate faithfully through long hours and be able to serve you when an emergency arises.

That is the reason your druggist deserves your patronage on every item of merchandise he carries. He is more than a merchant. He is a guardian of your health.
