Removing Temptation
A friend tells me that he attended church the other night where the pastor delivered an interesting lecture which was illustrated by stereopticon slides in the darkened auditorium. At a certain point in the lecture the collectors received the offering, the silver dollar which he had expected to give and fished out a nickel for the plate. He said: "If forty or fifty folks, after listening to that having been handed along by fifty splendid lecture couldn't contribute more than 15 or 20 cents, my silver dollar might tempt some one to steal it from the plate, as I chipped in a nickel and played safe." P. J. Daniels in Howard Conrant.
