

BIG BILL MAY BE PUT BACK ON TENNIS TEAM

Semi-Official Talk in Favor of His Restoration

RACQUET KING IS SILENT

Leaves Matter Up to His Friends and Refuses to Add to Speculation; Situation Unchanged

PARIS, July 20.—(AP)—Developments in the Tilden case were placed in the background by today's competition but possibilities of his return to the United States tennis team are being discussed in semi-official tennis circles.

The silence of Samuel H. Tilden, president of the United States tennis association, and Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the Davis cup committee, gave no foundation for such discussion but it is understood that under-cover moves have been started designed to straighten out the situation and restore Tilden to competition as suddenly as he was removed the day before the interzone final.

A confab of international tennis authorities is expected to take place here tomorrow to decide the next move, assuming the Americans will clinch victory over the Italians.

French Favor Tilden
The reaction over the American veteran's disbarment is strongly in his favor among French tennis followers who are unable to comprehend the action when French tennis players are doing exactly the same newspaper work unimpeded so far as their amateur standing is concerned.

The popular attitude in Tilden's favor was reflected especially in the spontaneous greeting accorded him on entering the stadium and taking his seat this afternoon.

"I have no addition to make to my statement of yesterday," declared Tilden today.

"Whatever my friends do is their business. I stand in my position. I do not intend to make any move before returning to the United States about the first week in August."

President Collom, when queried with reference to rumors of a new turn in the case, asserted the situation was unchanged but he was ready to act if any new developments warrant.

Mr. Wear said an inquiry by telephone from British officials concerned the status of Tilden because his disputed articles came from Wimbledon.

TY AND TRIS ENRICHED BY SCANDAL

"Dutch" Leonard's Tirade Did Famous Ball Players Good Instead of Harm

By FRANK G. MENKE
A large dose of scandal allegations isn't supposed to be helpful for anybody. But there are exceptions—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, for instance. They converted a mess of it into two additional years of baseball life and about $70,000 profit.

When the 1925 season ebbed to its end, Ty took a look at his legs and Tris took a squint or two at his own pedals and both boys decided that they had enough of baseball. Both were in comfortable circumstances and it was their feeling that they'd rather tear loose from diamond combat than go along farther on legs that were buckling under them, arms that were losing zip and bats that were minus the potency of youth.

Then a left hander changed all things!

In baseball it is the common belief that a left hander can do anything—eccentric. Nobody ever comes in contact with a left hander on the greenwards of the national pastime without talking a furtive look here, another one there, crossing his fingers, invoking heaven's blessing and being eternally watchful. For left handers are "Dutch" Leonard was a left—well, they're left handers.

Terrible Changes Made
"Dutch," running true to left handed form, knocked the entire baseball world giddy late in 1926 when he charged that Cobb and Speaker were terrible, terrible people, who gambled and played the horses and did sundry other things that were not ethical, grammatical, sanitary or anything that nice respectable folks should do. It was quite a day, that day when "Dutch" busted forth into newspaper prose.

The explosion that Leonard created came just at a time when Cobb and Speaker were announcing that they were about all done and washed up as baseball heroes and henceforth would retire to their vast acres and live peaceful and contented lives, far away from pop bottle throwers, left handers and hum decisions at the plate and elsewhere.

YANKEE OLYMPIC TEAM DISCOURAGED BY TRACK

Marsh at Amsterdam Stadium Unsatisfactory

RECORD HOPES SMASHED

Impossible to Set New Marks on Track, Says Coach; Dutch Engineers Only Hope

AMSTERDAM, July 20.—(AP)—The hopes of the American Olympic track and field team of establishing a new set of Olympic records in this year's games at Amsterdam were dashed to the ground today when Coach Lawson Robertson and his team paid their first visit to the Olympic stadium. The Americans found the stadium track and the runways for the field events in what Robertson termed an "eminently unsatisfactory condition."

The track, built on reclaimed marsh land, is soft and spongy and it will be almost impossible to turn in fast performances with such footing.

"Only a miracle can put the track into proper shape for the opening July 29," Coach Robertson told the Associated Press after his first view of it today. "I never have heard of such a situation—Olympic teams arriving daily to find the stadium track in such a hopelessly incomplete condition. It will be a tough job to break any records here."

Hard Surface Lacking
Robertson visited the stadium this afternoon shortly after the arrival of the President Roosevelt in Amsterdam and spent several hours inspecting the track and conferring with the Dutch officials. The American head coach suggested drastic measures for remedying the condition of the track, one of which was that cement should be mixed with cinders in an effort to provide a harder surface.

The situation is a result of the natural difficulties encountered by the Dutch engineers in reclaiming marsh land for the site of the Olympic plant. Tens of thousands of piles were sunk in the soft earth and the stadium built on this foundation.

According to Coach Robertson it was only last Tuesday that men with a practical knowledge of running track construction were called in for a final effort to remedy the conditions of the track. They have a herculean task before them if the track is to be in condition for the opening.

MacArthur Hopeful
Reports on the condition of the stadium arena reached the Americans when the President Roosevelt touched at Cherbourg yesterday, but Major General Douglas MacArthur, president of the American Olympic committee, was not inclined to credit the reports until he actually saw the stadium.

"On the battlefield never believe reports of disaster," MacArthur commented. "Leave it to the Dutch engineering genius to produce a proper field for the games."

Other coaches who viewed the stadium today were inclined to share Robertson's alarm at its condition, but the American athletes were told MacArthur's warning and leave it to the Dutch engineers.

Portland Team Makes Clean Sweep for Second Place

PORTLAND, Ore., July 20.—(AP)—Vancouver, B. C. oarsmen placed first in every event in the junior championship regatta of the North Pacific Association of Amateur Oarsmen here today on the Willamette river. Today's events were the first of a two-day meet.

Second place honors went to Portland with local oarsmen making a clean sweep as did Vancouver in the blue ribbon position. Victoria, B. C., men took everything in third place.

Only four events were on the schedule today.

The junior four event was the feature of the regatta. Portland took the lead but held it for only a few boat lengths. Striking 36, the Vancouver men pulled ahead and retained the lead until the finish. The time was 8:35.

Chester Barker won the junior singles in 10:25. The junior doubles went to Dawson Gordon and Ed Gordon in 9:26. Olive McConnan and Charles Gray won the 140-pound doubles in 9:24.
