else to do and when you want some free advertising do the same as he is getting rich so fast he doesn't care about such small things. If you see the light burning in his office don't worry, it is left merely to help the mice find the paste pot and get a square meal. When you bring ten cents' worth of work to the office that you have been dreaming over for a month, demand instant attention and delivery within ten minutes thereafter, and don't forget to impress upon him that it is a matter of charity anyhow and you can get better work elsewhere. The editor is used to all those things and won't mind it a little bit.

The Maupin base ball boys played Fairview Sunday at Fairview and carried away the honors.

BOARD AND ROOM BY THE DAY, WEEK OR MONTH

An exchange of some discernment of the facts in the case facetiously remarks that a country newspaper man has absolutely nothing to do every week after his paper is off the press until the next publication day. The papers mail themselves automatically, while the devil receives the kicks for all omissions and commissions. Subscribers fall over each other to get into the office and leave their money on the editor's desk, while the advertisers line up in a row with copy nicely prepared and set for the next issue. The type falls back into the cases of its own accord and cleaning up is not needed, as no one ever heard of a neat printing office. There are no books to keep and collections to make as the editor refers the whole cash system to the banker who gives him credit for receipts and pays his bills if any are ever presented, which is very rare. When the editor gets his mail he finds a nice bunch of exchanges and complimentary notices, which he peruses and classifies six days in every week. When he looks over his exchanges it is not to get ideas to write about for his subscribers, but merely to amuse himself and kill time. He never busies himself hunting up items, as all those things are thrust upon him, nicely edited, with spelling and grammatical expressions of the highest order, all of which arranges itself into type of the right size and in an artistic manner, free from errors of any sort, and is soon ready to climb onto the press and request the old thing to get up power and start something doing that will not hurt anybody's feelings nor tell any more of the truth about anybody than is necessary for them to do as they please. If the editor is seen on the street he is just loafing around and never does anything but amuse himself. When you have a grievance bring it to him, he has nothing
