Billie McGee

By Ben Lampman

Old Billy McGee, he was wiser than we, and often I've heard him remark, "If this town is the worst that you ever did see, why go out and reside in the park! There's no use for a hammer that doesn't drive nails, or a critic who won't shed his coat: if the wind that you jam was expended on sails, you'd furnish enough for a boat!" If the guy was a stranger, old Billy would say, "We're grieved that the town is de trop, but if you return say a year from today, by George you will find Maupin on top!"

In the code of old Billy much reason obtains concerning the little home town, though it cannot appeal where they're lacking in brains and busy in running this town down, if the burg doesn't suit there's a reason for that, though the problem be deep as a well, you can find the solution right under your hat—and there's occasion to yell! Talk it out with the boys for the weal of the town, and waving the skeptic aside, buck into the harness and all settle down, and work for the good of the town—Maupin.—Oregon Journal.
