Over the Road

Friday morning it was again our privilege to accompany Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Kelly for a ride in their handsome big car, this time to the Industrial rally and picnic in the grove above Tygh, where a large number from miles around, having come in some fifty cars and nearly as many rigs, to enjoy a real picnic in every sense of the word.

The events of the day are more widely treated by the regular Wamic correspondent in another column.

Late in the afternoon we procured passage to The Dalles in the 12-passenger car from that city. The trip was made by way of the new grade up the Butler canyon, by special permission from the construction superintendent of the road, which, while in a state of completion, and a fine highway in general principle, is excavated through so much sharp shell-rock, that it is a serious proposition for a set of tires to make the trip, and the County Court has refused to accept the work until improvement can be effected.
