Homestead Law, Con.

land shall be designated under this Act, then such application shall be allowed; otherwise it shall be rejected, subject to appeal; but no right to occupy such lands shall be acquired by reason of said application until said lands have been designated as stock-raising lands.

That any qualified homestead entryman may make entry under the homestead laws of lands so designated by the Secretary of the Interior, according to legal subdivisions, in areas not exceeding 640 acres, and in compact form so far as may be subject to the provisions of this Act, and secure title thereto by compliance with the terms of the homestead laws: Provided that a former homestead entry of land of the character described in section two thereof shall not be a bar to the entry of a tract within a raidus of 20 miles from such former entry under the provisions of this Act, subject to the requirements of laws as to residence and improvements which, together with the former entry, shall not exceed 640 acres: Provided further, that the entryman shall be required to enter all contiguous areas of the character herein described open to entry prior to the entry of any noncontiguous land: Provided further, that instead of cultivation as required by the homettead laws the entryman shall be required to make permanent improvements upon the land entered before final proof is submitted tending to increase the value of the same for stock-raising purposes, of the value of not less than $1.25 per acre, and at least one-half of such improvements geall be placed upon the land within three years after the date of entry thercof.

That any homestead entryman of lands of the character herein described, who has not submitted final proof upon his existing entry, shall have the right to enter, subject to the provisions of this Act, such amount of contiguous lands designated for entry unter the provisions of this Act as shall not, together with the amount embraced in his original entry, exceed 640 acres, and residence upon original entry shall be credited on both entries, but improvements must be made on the additional entry equal to $1.25 for each acre thereof.

That persons who have submitted final proof upon, or received patent for, lands of the character herein described under the homestead laws, and who own and reside upon the land so acquired, may, subject to the provisions of this Act, make additional entry for and obtain patent to contiguous lands, designated for entry under the provisions of this Act, which, together with the area theretofore acquired under the homestead law, shall not exceed 640 acres on proof of the expenditure required by this Act on account of permanent improvements upon the additional entry.

That any person who is the head of a family, or who has arrived at the age of 21 years and is a citizen of the U. S., who has entered or acquired under the homestead laws, prior to the passage of this Act, lands of the character described in this Act, the area of which is less than 640 acres, and who is unable to exercise the right of additional entry herein conferred because no lands subject to entry under this Act adjoin the tract so entered or acquired or lie within the 20 mile limit provided for in this Act, may, upon submitting proof that he resides upon and has not sold the land so entered or acquired and against which land thers are no encumbrances, relinquish or convey to the U. S. the land so occupied, entered or acquired, and in lieu thereof, within the same land-office district, may enter and acquire title to 640 acres of the land subject to entry under this Act, but must show compliance with all the provisions of this Act respecting the new entry and with all the provisions of existing homestead laws except as modified herein.

That the commutation provisions of the homestead laws shall not apply to any entries made under this Act.

That any homestead entryman or patentees who shall have, for 90 days after the designation of lands subject to entry under the provisions of this Act and contiguous to those entered or owned and occupied by him, the preferential right to make additional entry as provided in this Act: Provided that where such lands contiguous to the lands of two or more entrymen or patentees entitled to additional entries under this section are not sufficient in area to enable such entrymen to secure by additional entry the maximum amounts to which they are entitled, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make an eqitable division of the lands among the several entrymen or patentees, applying to exercise preferential rights, such division to be in tracts of not less than 40 acres, or other legal subdivision and so made as to equalize as nearly as possible the area which such entrymen and patentees will acquire by adding the tracts embraced in additional entaies to the lands originally held or owned by them: Provided further, that where but one such tract of vacant land may adjoin the lands of two or more entrymen or patentees entitled to exercise preferential right hereunder, the tract in question may be entered by the person who first submits to the local land office his application to exercise said preferential right.

That all entries made and patents issued under the provisions of this Act shall be subject to and contain a reservation to the U. S. of all the coal and other minerals in the lands so entered and patente , together with the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same. The coal and other mineral deposits in such lands shall be subject to disposal by the U. S. in accordance with the provisions of the coal and mineral lands laws in force at the time of such disposal. Any person qualified to locate and enter the coal or other mineral deposits, or having the right to mine and remove the same under the laws of the U. S., shall have the right at all times to enter upon the lands entered or patented, as provided by this Act, for the purpose of prospecting for coal or other mineral therein, provided he shall not injure, damage, or destroy the permanent improvements of the entryman or patentee, and shall be liable to and shall compensate the entryman or patentee for all damage to the crops on such lands by reason of such prospecting. Any person who has acquired from the U. S. the coal or other mineral deposits in any such land, or the right to mine and remove the same, may reenter and occupy so much of the surface thereof as may be required for all purposes reasonably incident to the mining or removal of the coal or other minerals, first, upon securing the written consent or waiver of the homestead entryman or patentee; second upon payment of the dam-
