YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnait authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callous, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callous loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corner callous. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

of the PARSONAGE

By ETHEL HUESTON

THE TWINS TRY TO EM-BARRASS FAIRY WITH SOME PRACTICAL JOK-ING WHEN HER BEAU COMES TO VISIT HER.

Mr. Starr is a widower Methodist minister with five charming daughters. Prudence, the eldest is nineteen. She keeps house. Fairy, aged seventeen, is a college freshman. Carol and Lark, twins, are in high school, and Constance is in the grades. Mr. Stark is assigned to the congregation at Mount Mark, la., and the advent and establishment of his interesting family in the parsonage there stirs the curiosity of the whole town. The story concerns the affairs of the parsonage girls. Prudence has her hands full with the mischievous twins and Connie. Fairy has just announced that her beau is coming to spend the evening. The twins decide to have some fun, and have made their plans accordingly.

As soon as they finished supper Lark sald, "Don't you think we'd better go right to bed, Prue? We don't want to taint the atmosphere of the parher blue eyes moistened, "are jist as sonage. "Oh, no," disclaimed Fairy, good-naturedly, "I can give an extra rub to the ones we want to use-that is enough. I do appreciate the thought, though, thanks very much."

So the twins plunged in, carefully she added anxiously. "Oh, I'll be so disappointed if things go badly." Fairy was a little late getting upstairs to dress, but she took time to drop into her sisters' room. They were all in bed, breathing heavily. She

"Come on." She opened the door into the sitting room. "We're coming out here if you do not mind, Prue,' And Fairy explained the difficulty.

"Why, that's very strange," said Prudence, knitting her brows. was in there right after supper, and I didn't notice anything. What does it smell like?" "It's a new smell to me," laughed Fairy, "but something about it is Prudence went to investigate, and Fairy shoved a big chair near the the steaming stew. He gasped, and disappointed. If the members would table, waving her hand toward it lightly with a smile at Babbie. Then she sank into a low rocker, and leaned one arm on the table. She wrinkled her forehead thoughtfully. "That smell," she began. "I am very suspicious about it. It was not at all natural-"

"Excuse me, Fairy," he said, ill at ease for the first time in her knowledge of him. "Did you know your sleeve was coming out?"

Fairy gasped and raised her arm. "Both arms, apparently," he continued, smiling, but his face was "Excuse me just a minute, will you?" Fairy was unruffled. She sought her sister. "Look here, Prue-what do you make of this? I'm coming to pleces! I'm hanging by a single thread, as it were."

Her sleeves were undoubtedly ready to drop off at a second's notice! Pru-dence was shocked. She grew posi-tively white in the face.

"Oh, Fairy," she walled. "We are bie. "My insides bear startling testidisgraced.'

"Not a bit of it," said Fairy coolly. "I remember now that Lark was looking for the scissors before supper. Aren't those twins unique? This is quette itself must be subservient to twins, it seems. Don't forget to bring in the ste- at a quarter past nine, and have it as good as possible-please, dear,"

"I will," vowed Prudence, "Pil-Pil use cream. Oh, those horrible twins!" ran lightly up the stairs, humming a snatch of song

But Prudence did a poor job of en tertaining Babble during her sister's absence. She felt really dizzy! Such a way to introduce Etiquette into the parsonage life. She was glad to make her escape from the room when Fairy returned, a graceful figure in fine blue

A little after nine she called out fresh disaster, came running out. "What now? What-"

"I forget what you told me to say," whispered what was it? The soup is ready, and piping hot-but what is it you want twins shook in their beds with rage me to say?"

Fairy screamed with laughter, "You coose!" she cried. "Say anything you like. It doesn't make any difference what you say.'

"Oh, I am determined to do my part just right," vowed Prudence fervently, "according to etiquette and all. What was it you said?"

Fairy stifled her laughter with difficulty, and said in a low

Yes, There is a Smell," He Said.

"Wouldn't you like a nice, hot oyster stew?" Prudence repeated it after her breathlessly.

So Fairy returned once more, and soon after Prudence tapped on the door. Then she opened it, and thrust her curly head inside. "Wouldn't you like a little nice, hot oyster stew?" she chirped methodically. And Fairy said, "Oh, yes, indeed, Prudence-this is so nice of you."

The three gathered sociably about the table. Babble was first to taste gulped, and swallowed some water with more haste than grace. Then he toyed idly with spoon and wafer until Prudence tasted also. Prudence did not gasp. She did not cry out. She looked up at her sister with wide eyes -a world of pathos in the glance. But Fairy did not notice.

"Now, please do not ask me to talk until I have finished my soup," she was saying brightly.

Then she tasted it! She dropped her spoon with a great clatter, and jumped up from the table. "Mercy!" she shricked. "It is poisoned!"

Babbie leaned back in his chair and laughed until his eyes were wet. Prudence's eyes were wet, too, but not from laughter! What would etiquette think of her, after this?

"What did you do to this soup, Prudence?" demanded Fairy.

"I made it-nothing else," faltered poor Prudence, quite crushed by this blow. And oysters forty cents a pint/ "It's pepper, I think," gasped Bab- in it.

"Revenge, ye gods, how sweet," chanted Fairy. "The twins are get-ting even with a vengeance—the same twins you said were adorable, Babbie." It must be said for Fairy that her good nature could stand almost anything. Even this did not seriously "Go in and entertain Babble till I disturb her. "Do you suppose you can come down, won't you?" And Fairy find us some milk, Prue? And crackers! I'm so fond of crackers and milk, aren't you, Babbie?"

"Oh, I adore it. But serve a microscope with it, please. I want to examine it for microbes before I taste." But Prudence did better than that. She made some delicious cocoa, and opened a can of pear preserves, donated to the parsonage by the amiable Mrs. Adams, The twins were very A little after nine she called out fond of pear preserves, and had been dismally, "Fairy!" The three had a merry little feast, after Prudence wretchedly, all, and their laughter rang out so often and so unrestrainedly that the > and disappointment. It speaks well for the courage of Babble, and the attractions of Fairy, that he came to the parsonage again and again. In time he became the best of friends with the twins themselves, but he always called them "the adorables," and they never asked him why. The punishment inflicted upon them by Prudence rankled in their memories for many months.

"The offense was against Fairy," said Prudence, with a solemnity she did not feel, "and the reparation must be done to her. For three weeks you must do all of her bedroom work, and run every errand she requires. Moreover, you must keep her shoes well cleaned and nicely polished, and must do every bit of her darning!"

The twins would have preferred whipping a thousand times. They felt they had got a whipping's worth of pleasure out of their mischief! But a punishment like this sat heavily upon their proud young shoulders, and from that time on they held Fairy practially immune from their pranks

Prudence did not bother her head about etiquette after that experience. "I'm strong for comfort," she declared. and since the two cannot live together in one family, I say we do without etiquette.

And Fairy nodded in agreement, smiling good-naturedly.

CHAPTER VI.

Practicing Economy. It was a dull day early in December. Prudence and Fairy were sewing in the bay window of the sitting room.

"We must be sure to have all the scraps out of the way before Connie gets home," said Prudence, carefully fitting together pieces of a dark, warm, furry material. "It has been so long since father wore this cont, I am sure she will not recognize it."

"But she will ask where we got it, and what shall we say?" "We must tell her it is goods we have had in the house for a long time. That is true. And I made this fudge on purpose to distract her attention. Poor cally, "Her heart is just set on a brandnew coat. I know she will be bitterly just pay up we could get her one. November and December are such bad months for parsonage people. Everyone is getting ready for Christmas now. and forgets that parsonage people need Christmas money, too." Fairy took a pin from her mouth. "I have honestly been ashamed of Connie the last few Sundays. It was so cold. and she wore only that little thin summer jacket. She must have been half frozen."
