Drivilings

(Contributed)

I went down to the swimming hole Sunday. Uncle Pete was there sir, and lots of pretty girls. And I was glad I wore my flasby tie and my sport shirt and my yellow shoes. And I jumped up and hollered "Hooray for the Fourth of July" to get them to look at me. They said, "Poor boy, it is Dog Days and he doesn't get enough water." And they splashed me and got water on my flasby tie and my sport shirt and my yellow shoes and I went home to Mother.

Me and Bill were riding through Tygh Valley in my car. Bill said "Step on her" and I said, "No, Bill, it is wicked to speed through town. It endangers the health and happiness of the cows and chickens." And he said, "Aw, step on her and be a sport." And I did and I was, and we took the hill out of town on high, and the Justice of the Peace sent Claude on Woodrow after us and led us back to pay our fine. Darn Bill!

Yesterday I went into Osborn's ice cream parlor. I bought a ebanee for a dime and won a nice aluminum pancake turner and I went down to the river and sat on a rock and swatted mosquitos with it and smoked a little on a bum cigar I've got and the mosquitos didn't have a chance!

I was sitting in the blacksmith shop listening to the news. I said "Bill give us a song," and he looked at me and sang, "O you look like a June bug to me," and I hit him and the doctor says I can sit up tomorrow.
