The Ocean Grave

Cr is Kellar

An old man sat by the murmuring sea
And gazed out in the blue—
Where great gray ships from a foreign shore
Were at eaning into view.

The thin lips moved; a bitter sigh
Escaped from the old man's least
As I drew nearer to him then
I caught these words in part:

My only boy sailed down that bay.
He heard democracy
In anguish call, America
Bless't Mother of the Free—
But ere he reached the land of wine
'Twas only by a day,
He sank beneath those waves of brine,
He sank the sea wolf prey.

No wooden cross now marks his rest,
No flowers bloom o'er his grave
No epitaph carved on a stone
To say here sleeps the brave.

No hero from the shores of France
Will e're return to me.
A bitter memory in my heart—
The rest kept by the sea.
