SOLID FACTS

SUBJECT NO. 5

Great Future

Did you ever notice Mr. Farmer that the farmer who forges ahead and becomes the envy of the careless or indolent neighbor is the man who takes things in season. He is ready to see his wheat with the first early moisture of fall because he prepared his summer-fallow in time. His fence posts are hauled and sharpened ready for driving when the ground is ready. His bins are emptied and hauled to winter quarters and his grain is safe in the R. R. warehouse early enough to be shipped out with the early sales etc. When the snow flies he does not rustle wood for winter. He tends to his stock and knows that his straw stacks are safe because he fenced them in season. While the neighbor do well hauls frozen limbs for fuel he oils his harness and works indoors. The moral of the above is—Watch the successful farmer and do like wise. It costs less and rewards more.

When a traveler boards a train south bound toward Bend he follows the gorge cut through brown, desolate, and mostly bare hills. Until he comes to Maupin with its mill and elevators and hotel he thinks that man has been illy used to be planted in Central Oregon, but at Maupin I hear him say—Where lie the fields that grow the grain which demands two such fine elevators, and is the wheat ground for flour in that mill? Then Mr. Kelly and Mr. Bell and the conductor and Dad Coal and the rest of the boys puff out their chests and say: Why man those elevators are this minute bursting with grain; that mill is swamped with orders for flour milled from local wheat. Above the gorge are great plateau farms for rolling miles and miles east and west and beyond the plains are billions of feet of fir and pine, etc. We are all glad they boost the neighborhood to Mr. Prospective Settler or investor when he sticks his inquiring head out of the coach at Maupin station, but we can't ask Fischer and Kelly and Staats and Conklin to boost all the time for all of Southern Wasco county on a one man audience scale. What is needed is a neat attractive circular, printed locally, sent out by the citizens and Commercial Clubs setting out the resources and possibilities in honest, conservative and complete form. This circular should not only reach the man who says hello Bill at Maupin, but should catch him in St. Paul, Chicago, Omaha, Portland, Cleveland, and so on along the line, sent out every few days to railway points and soon a live reception committee with offices and data on land and business opportunities would be busy at Maupin and Wapinitia.

The Reclamation Record should print something monthly from our project to be read by all other irrigators in the U. S. Sowing such seed will bring a crop of buyers and tourists satisfying all needs. The Yakima project will require $5,000 cars this season to move its crop to the world markets. This means a train 22 miles long worth $40,000,000.00. It will carry one million pounds of hogs, 15,000 cars of apples, 1,200 cars of hay, 200 cars of soft fruit, besides thousands of sheep and cattle. Before irrigation developed Mr. Farmer you could have purchased 1,000,000 acres of this productive land for $2.50 per acre.

Some day, Mr. Farmer, when we take irrigation seriously and develop our natural advantage—our sugar beet factories will be running to capacity. Our creamery and cheese factories will look like money from the mint. Auto transports will keep daily schedules to the Dalles, to Maupin, to Portland, carrying cream, onions, corn, cheese, sugar, flour, melons, fruit and lumber will be carried to the treeless farming districts east.

Do you believe this Mr. Farmer? You won't send your sons and daughters away then to high school or college as these will spring up at home. In place of 500 to 1000 people on the plains with 300 to 3000 acres for one man, we will see 20, 40, 100 acre farms, lots of them, all raising the stuff that will feed their families and enrich the state. Land values will raise to the equal of the older irrigated districts.

The first thing in hand is to boost for our November election, for the improvement of our main market roads in District 32, including Maupin and Wapinitia. Let's go over 100 per cent loyal to our district.
