The following concerning George McDonald of the Maupin State Bank we copy from The Crab, a paper published by employes of the U. S. National Bank of Portland:

Seems just like some invisible some thing or somebody, which or whom we'll call "Hunch," is constantly busy passing out promissuous to the effect that whenever a concern needs a finished product it'll find what it requires at the U. S. of Portland; and then Mr. Invisible Hunch goes and puts a bug in the ear of one or the other of our best and most popular workers—and biff! he's grabbed and gone. This time it's George McDonald who's been grabbed. The Maupin State Bank needed an assistant cashier, got the hunch and did the grabbing. Mac is a true friend of the whole force, and we join in wishing him the very best of good fortune. He was likewise a loyal pal of the U. S. Crab. He hesitated not to tell the Crab to its face just wherein its expressions were not according to Hoyle, and was always hinting to the Crabbedy man should attend night school along with other ignorant, unlettered foreigners. Yes, Mac's kind-heartedness will be sadly missed. We'll never forget how, when the Crab would see fit to consult that big two-tent dictionary by George's desk, he would say with withering sarcasm: "If you can't find it in Webster, just ask me."
