Interesting Institution

One of the oldest firms in San Francisco is the historic house of W. P. Fuller & Co.

Unquestionably the leading paint dealers this side of Chicago, with one of the largest paint factories in America, and with thirteen branch houses scattered at strategic points from the Canadian line to Mexico, taking in the greater part of the Western American Continent.

The output of the firm is enormous and its export range covers China, Japan, India, Australia, New Zealand, Mexico, Central America and South America.

This great firm is a part of California, one of its institutions that has grown up with the state from early days participating in its fortunes, and sharing in the glory of its achievements.

W. P. Fuller & Co. is not only old in age, its existence going back for over seventy years, but it is also old in traditions, representing at its best the creative spirit of the great pioneers, whose energy and brains built the West out of the wilderness and the desert. The founders of the firm belonged to the class of early Argonauts.
