bers of the primary room, also an impromptu number given by Clifford McCorkle and Arthur Philmler was well received.

The table was beautifully decorated with appropriately colored crepe paper and cut flowers, donated by the ladies of the town. Upon the table were exhibited several sundials, a water-clock and a sand-clock, constructed by the pupils of the science class, also many maps, diagrams, compositions, stories and other written work from the various of the different rooms, in which the parents present took much interest in studying the progress of their children in their different lines of work.

The pupils of the school enjoyed having with them the goodly number of visitors that were in attendance, and their very apparent enjoyment of the program and the exhibits. We thank them for their attendance, their pleasant and encouraging remarks, and their many beautiful flowers. We invite them and their friends to come again as often as possible. Our next literary program will be held Friday, October 28.

The girls of Miss Derthick's room have been laundering the curtains this week. Several plants were also added to the school room decorations.

Tygh Valley School Notes

The closing week of the first school month finds the primary room with perfect attendance. Last Friday being visitor's day, the parents had the opportunity to see the primary room engaged in carrying out the work in their daily program. At the intermediate Literary Society meeting to be held this week primary pupils will take part in a little play.

Last Friday after a pleasant morning assembly in the high school room the intermediate grade were visited by a group of the parents. We were very much pleased to have them with us and to show them our bulletin board and plants. We hope they will come often.

Last Friday the girls in the intermediate room planned for a surprise party for one of our eighth grade girls, Gladys Morrow. The high school and intermediate grades were invited, also the teachers. On Tuesday evening they surprised Gladys and spent a pleasant evening at her home playing games.

Monday morning school opened with everyone present and on hand for assembly.

The Intermediate Literary Society will give a small program next Friday at 3:30, in their room. All the townspeople are cordially invited to attend.

The school orchestra organized by designating the following officers: Thelma Bonney, president; Winston Lake, secretary-treasurer, and Fred Miller, clerk. The young people are very enthusiastic.

Tuesday morning when school opened it was discovered that a myriad of yellow jackets had visited the high school room. The boys armed themselves with brooms a fly swatters and soon every yellow jacket had met his doom. A second army visited the room that evening but these the janitor disposed of.

We are very proud of the work done by the young ladies of the high to make our room attractive. White curtains adorn all the windows. Beautiful bouquets and flower pots are a part of the decorations.

The third week of school opened with 19 in the high school.

Local History

The following interesting bit of local history is clipped from a recent issue of the Antelope Herald, which is edited by H. C. Rouper, a pioneer of Central Oregon.

"One of the remote towns of Oregon is Paulina, from whence come Mrs. Miller and son to the Imperial. Paulina town was named after a decidedly bad Indian whose band of followers raided and murdered and caused trouble generally until a settler named Metolius pumped him full of lead near Burnt Ranch in the Deschutes canyon."—Oregonian.

"The bones of Howard Maupin would turn in their grave were they to read the last three lines of the last weeks items in the Oregonian."

"Chief Paulina was undoubtedly 'Bad Medicine' whose chief home was on Beaver creek a tributary of Crooked river in southeastern section of the present Crook county.

"Howard Maupin settled in the head of the Antelope Valley in 1863 on what is now part of Judge Bennett's ranch, and where the trail from the valley passes through."

The Deschutes river was crossed by a ferry just above the mouth of Bake Oven creek; which trail and ferry always went by the name of Maupin, and that is why the present town of Maupin was so named."

"But to get back to our story Chief Paulina ran off Maupin's band of horses about 20 head. In the early seventies Maupin sold his Antelope ranch and moved over to Trout creek where Little Trout creek joins it."

"There one night Paulina with six of his braves again made a raid on the horses. Maupin overtook the band in the head of the gulch running into Trout creek, ever since known as 'Paulina Basin.' There he killed two or three of the swashes including Paulina and recovered all his horses. The rest of the Indians left in a hurry for their own 'illahee' and never bothered settlers stock any more, at least in his part of the country."

Burnt ranch is on the banks of the John Day river and some thirty miles or more east of the scene of Paulina's death, a long way from that place. The name was derived from another Indian outrage in which two men, Clark and Masterson, just escaped with their lives but that is another story."
