Words Travel in Cycles, Speakers and Writers Dropping into the Mode of the Moment.

"Allocation" said the wordmonger is a word that is being given considerable prominence. It became popular during the war in connection with ships and loans. The "allocation" of shipping and the "allocation" of loans came to be current phrases. Not long ago the senate called on the President for information as to how he had "allocated" certain funds. In a recent newspaper story about an operating benefit in one of the big cities the newspapers said that "the allocation of boxes is to be based on the size and date of the contribution."

"Allocation" is so closely allied to "allot," "assign" and "apportion" that the shipping and treasury authorities might just as well have said the "allotment" of ships and the "apportionment" of funds or loans. But words come into fashion and writers and speakers fall into a "fall" for the prevailing mode in words as some persons do for the prevailing colors in socks or neckties and the prevailing style in haircuts, says the Washington Star. In the "olden times"—that is, when grandfather was in business—"allocation" had somewhat of a run as a financial word and one could often hear and see the phrase "allocation of the shares of the company."

Gain and Lose Popularity

Fox Ranching in Europe.

Although it is not generally known, quite a number of foxes were sold last year to parties residing in Europe, mainly throughout Sweden, Norway and Switzerland. One rancher who has supplied a number of pairs to these Europeans, states that the industry is spreading in a truly wonderful manner in these countries, and that this year he expects to be able to sell practically all his foxes abroad. There is only one drawback at present to a general spread of the industry there, and that is the rather high cost of feeding, but this is being overcome, and the sale of breeding stock at good prices will amply cover the higher expense. The present rate of exchange is also a disadvantage, but this does not seem to affect those who want to start in at the business, as the Europeans are now used to this. There is most certainly a big field in Europe for the fox industry, and that it will some day amount to something big is a surety.
