A Plow Prerogative

The plow is a conglomeration of wood, steel perverseness, and profanity, which is used for mashing the face of the earth, and while it must be admitted it is also one of the greatest factors in the farming business, it is also one of the most contrary critters the farmer has to contend with.

Where the plow originated is unknown, as it has been on the job so long that even the oldest inhabitant cannot remember its inception. In its early form the plow consisted of a stick which had grown naturally in the form of a shabby club, and this, with the curved end sharpened, was dragged through the ground by the mooley cow or the farmer's wife, whichever happened to be around handy. From this humble beginning the plow has struggled along and developed, until now there are on the market more styles and varieties of it than there are political propagandists.

There now are walking and riding plows, running and jumping plows, steam and electric plows, gasoline, and, in fact, plows of every description operated by every known means of power yet discovered except dynamite. Then there also is the gang plow and the disc plow, the sulky plow and the snow plow, and the list goes on until one stands in wall eyed astonishment wondering where the thing will end. There have been more effort and enthusiasm put into devising new methods for scratching up the terra firma than expended on any other known piece of mechanism.

The act of plowing also is of more than passing interest, and there are many and surprising things uncovered sometimes when the plow goes over a field. Among other things the plowman has unearthed guns and cannon, buckets of money, corpse bumblebees, barbed wire, rattlesnakes, Indian arrowheads, dead dogs and then, occasionally, when everything is going smoothly, the plow hits a large, robust rock, and the resultant jolt causes the plowman to rise impetuously out of his seat, cut a large, graceful arc in the air, and light in the adjoining field with his features in an ant hill. At other times this performance is changed somewhat. Sometimes it is a tree stump, instead of a rock, which gets in the way, but outside of this change in the cast the act is much the same.

In the olden days, while plowing was much harder work and necessitated a lot of walking, the above-mentioned operation was unknown. Instead of doing an aerial flip through the atmosphere when he struck something, the plowman simply got one handle of the device shoved through his lung.

At the present time, however, plowing has resolved to such a mechanical science that it is robbed of most of its excitement and charm. The plowman simply goes out and fires up the engine attached to a row of shares which cut a half acre swath at a time, sets the gears so the machine will reverse when it reaches the fence, climbs in the seat and goes to sleep. Then when the dinner bell rings he wakes up, and his plowing is all done, and in view of this that stuff about "the plowboy homeward plodding his weary way" sounds rather out of place these days.

If you want the best in plows, let us sell you an Oliver.

Kindly Remarks

Many young men are willing to start at the bottom—if they can go up in the elevator. The man who boasts of having an "open mind" often mistakes a vacancy for an opening. If you can't stand adversity you're not fitted to stand prosperity. Think this over. When you see a man doing a lot of strutting, remember what happens to a turkey. If you lazily remain of no account you'll never have much of a bank account.

Home from South

After returning from our trip to California the thought occurred to me that perhaps a few lines from us might be of interest to you. We left here on the 18th of December, were gone about two months, our visit was confined mostly to the San Joaquin valley where our relatives and friends live of whom are all well and enjoying life. In speaking of the San Joaquin valley country I would say we rode over its fertile valley and saw its wonderful vineyards and orange groves and beautiful homes, we were truly brought to realize it was a country of great resources.

While in California, we visited in Los Angeles, San Diego and Mexico. One of our most interesting parts of our visit was the privilege of attending an Evangelistic Revival held at Fresno, by Aimee Semple Mc Pherson in the Municipal auditorium which had a seating capacity of about six thousand people and it was always filled to overflowing and often there were hundreds of people that could not be admitted. It was a pleasure to us to be able to attend these meetings for two weeks. This most wonderful woman believes in the baptism of the Holy Spirit and Divine Healing and I wish the readers of your paper could have seen as the writer of this article did what wonderful work she did in Divine healing, the deaf were made to hear, the blind to see, the dumb to speak and the cripple to walk. As she spoke in her simple child like faith and told the sweet story of Jesus, she riveted the attention of the thousands of people that were listened to her voice and as she gave the after call in her quiet and altogether lovely way, we would see hundreds answer the call and we were brought to realize that she was surely bringing in the sheave and a most wonderful woman and surely called of God into his Service.

Respectfully,
Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Evick
