WHITE HOLLAND IS POPULAR

While Not So Common as Bronze It Is Widely Raised-Has Many Excellent Qualities.

The white Holland turkey, while not so common as the bronze variety, is nevertheless widely raised and ex-ceedingly popular. People who keep them long enough to get familiar with their qualities and characteristics generally prefer them to any other

The origin of the white Holland is not known, according to writers on poultry, but it is believed to have been developed by breeding white birds se-lected from other breeds, which appear occasionally as among chickens and are classed as "sports." It seems quite certain that they did not come from Holland or the Netherlands. It has come to the front as a distinct breed since about 1800. The standard weights are, 26 lbs. for a cock; 16 lbs. for a cockerel; 16 for a hen and 10 for a pullet. At the same time any of these classes may be fattened to from three to six pounds above the weight quoted. Six months old gobblers, or cockerels, have been known

In some flocks the hens will not go broody or hatch; or, if they do, it will be only after the season is far advanced. Other speci-mens will want to sit before laying a dozen eggs and some have raised two broods in a season. One man is reported to have owned four turkey hens which inid 264 eggs during the season, while one of them raised a brood in July. Like all other breeds the white birds must have proper care and proper feed to be profitable. Colds, lice and filth and general neglect will be

Plan to Have as Few Cracks and Crevices as Possible, Built in Portable Sections.

When first in the poultry business we thought that nests made of scrap lumber or small boxes were satisfactory. Now we believe that the nests should be of smooth matched lumber with as few cracks and crevices as possible, says a writer in an exchange.

When we used open nests in some of the houses the birds were constanting roosting on them or bothering the hens while they were laying. After Of European invention is a sheet several eggs had been laid in a nest another hen might decide to scratch around in the litter in that nest. This ed to radiate more heat in a room resulted in broken eggs and then it was only a short step to the egg eating habit.

The best pests are built with a small track at the rear waere the hens can enter. The eggs are removed by lowering a hinged door in front These nests are slightly darkened and the hens hardly see the eggs that are laid. There is not much scratching in the litter in a darkened nest. If a soft-shelled egg is laid and broken the danger of the hen eating it is reduced.

The egg-eating habit probably causes as much loss and discouragement as any habit or disease which troubles poultry keepers. The remedy is largely in prevention and this consists in building the right kind of nests.

NEW LIVE STOCK REPORT SERVICE $......

Plans Being Made to Give Monthly Changes in Situation on Farms of Country.

ALL DETAILS WILL BE GIVEN

Careful Study Being Made of Possible Methods for Gathering and Distributing Information to Those Interested.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Plans for a nation-wide live stock reporting service showing the monthly changes in the live stock situation on farms are now being made by the United States Department of Agriculture, under the $70,000 congressional ap-propriation recently made for this work. The service will also include the forecasting and reporting of the important live stock movements. Make-Up of Reports.

At recent conferences of statisticians and crop and live stock estimating experts it was felt that the monthly re ports of changes on the farm should include reports of births, deaths, losses, marketings, purchases, and animals bred, with periodical classiexpansion of experimental work carried on by the division of crop and live stock estimates during the last three or four years. Monthly reports will be obtained from 70,000 to 100,-000 farms, and state indexes of changes at least for the corn belt, and eastern and southern states will be developed. The range states on cattle and sheep will be covered by monthly reports from those states.

Information to Be Given.

The forecasting and reporting of the important live stock movements will be based upon the movement of feeder cattle and lambs from the range states to the corn belt feed lots, the movement from the feed lots to market, the movement into the eastern feed lots such as Lancaster, Pa., and the calf crop of the range states, and estimates of the feeder hog move ment in the Middle West. A careful study is now being made of possible methods for gathering and reporting this information.

At conferences held to develop a live stock reporting program, representatives of farmers' organizations, co-operative live stock shipping associations, the packing establishments, and other live stock interests were present. Many large live stock proalso indicated a desire to co-operate.

COUNTY AGENTS AID FARMER

Specialists in Many States Now Devote Full Time to Management Extension Work

states now have 30 specialists to deextension work. County agents in 895 countles report that they distributed 51.083 farm account books in 1921; 519 counties reported 18,448 kept, and 444 reported that 8,454 farmers were assisted in summarizing their accounts. County agents in 237 counties report that 2,972 farmers made changes in their business as a result of keeping accounts. More than 800 farm-account schools, with an attendance of 20,000, were held in 1921, the United States Department of Agriculture reports.

SKUNKS WORRY BEEKEEPERS

Odoriferous Little Animals Coax Honey Gatherers Out at Night and Eat Them.

A report from Ohio received by the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture says that skunks are giving a great deal of trouble to beekeepers in that region. The skunks visit the hives at night and scratch on the outside till the bees come out. As soon as they appear the skunks eat them. The biological survey recommends that under such conditions the hives be fenced in with chicken wire at least three feet high,
