Entered as second class mail matter September 2, 1914, at the postoffice at Maupin, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

So far as we have been able to get reports the school bill failed in this end of the county, which fact all may justly be proud of. An able writer in a large county weekly comments thus: Oregon voters have adopted a measure which leading attorneys have declared unconstitutional. We refer to the so-called compulsory school bill. This measure will in all likelihood be in litigation for three or four years. The campaign just past has left a sore spot with many Oregonians. The litigation over it will keep raw these sore spots, and we will behold this state torn by religious suspicions. Indeed we are right now in an unenviable position in Oregon. Many very sincere votes were cast for the school bill. But it is our belief that proponents of the measure have set in motion elements that will defeat their very ends in a unified nation; that will leave chisms and strife instead of coordinated working of all citizens

What the patrons must do

A list of approved boxes, with information as to where they may be obtained, will be furnished on application to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General (Division of Rural Mail).

If a patron finds that the largest size box specified by the Department is not of sufficient size to hold all his mail, he may make application to the Department for permission to have a larger box manufactured.

The use of locks on boxes is not absolutely required, but is encouraged as a measure of protection. If patrons provide locks for their boxes, carriers shall accept the keys and unlock and lock the boxes when serving them. Patrons should cooperate to facilitate the carrier's work by adopting for each route locks of such patterns that master keys may be fitted to them. Master keys should be delivered only to postmasters at distributing offices who will place them in the hands of carriers.

Postmasters and carriers are prohibited from assisting in the sale of any particular box, or acting directly or indirectly as agents for any box manufacturer or agent; but postmasters are permitted to order, for present or prospective patrons, upon the patron's request, any approved box selected by the patrons, but must not receive any compensation or profit for such accommodation.

Such boxes are by law afforded the same protection from injury and depredation as any other regulation mail box, and are regarded as United States mail boxes and should be used exclusively for the reception of mail matter. Mailable matter deposited in patrons' boxes is subject to the postal laws, including payment of postage.

Persons neglecting or refusing to comply with these conditions will be regarded as not desiring rural delivery, and the carrier will be directed not to serve them.

Patrons are expected to afford the carriers every facility in the performance of their duties, by keeping the roads open after heavy snowfalls, and by using their influence with the proper authorities to maintain them in good repair.

Postmasters will report to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General the names of all patrons maintaining inappropriate, unsafe, and unsuitable boxes, indicating kind and size of box, name of manufacturer if known, and date of erection; also the names of patrons whose boxes are improperly erected on routes.

Service must not be withdrawn from any box without specific instructions from the Department.
