Between the Plow Handles

Any farmer who has walked between the handles of an Oliver steel walking plow can tell you how perfectly these plows operate. No one is in a better position to tell you why Oliver plows have become popular where other plows have failed. Uniform standard of quality and ability to do excellent work under all conditions have made Oliver steel walking plows familiar equipment on American farms.

The high degree of polish and design of the mouldboard and the angle at which the base of the plow operates reduces scouring trouble to a minimum with Oliver steel plows. Smooth running plows that scour thoroughly operate with the least possible draft.

For years of service and genuine plowing satisfaction no plow can be better built.

Schools Given Rooms

Public school classes are occupying several rooms in the parochial school building of Amityville Long Island, as a result of the generous action of Rev. James F. Irwin, pastor of St. Martin's church of that city. Knowing that the public school buildings were hopelessly overcrowded, the facilities out of date and that there were no immediate prospects of improvement, the priest placed several class rooms, gratuitously, at the disposal of the school board. The board gladly accepted the generous offer and installed teachers and pupils in the Parochial school.

There are now at St. Martin's school about one hundred public school children enjoying the privileges of education. The Parochial school classes are attended by 250 Catholic school children. Recently, during the illness of one of the public school teachers the Methodist Minister took charge of the grades and taught school, as of years before but this time in a Parochial
