TANK HEATERS ARE FAVORED When Milk Cows Are Watered Infrequently It Is Poor Policy to Supply Ice Water.

When a cow drinks water, her body at once sets to work raising it, if necessary, to the same temperature as exists normally in the body. In order to warm the water taken in, heat is just as necessary as it is to warm a kettle of water on the stove.

To provide the heat necessary, the blood and internal organs give up a portion of their supply until more is supplied from food previously consumed. As the milk cow is a heavy consumer of water, much heat is required to warm it. Consequently when cows are allowed to drink water that is very cold, a high percentage of the feed eaten is required to heat it. If it is true that some heat is being given off from the body all the time and when the amount of water taken in at one time is small the loss is unimportant. But when the cows are watered only once or twice daily, and then get near ice water, they are likely to suffer injury and more feed is necessary. Stated briefly, it is a question of balancing good feed and the cow's time digesting it, against the cost of a good tank heater and a few pails of cobs or coal. The man interested in getting the most out of his cows and in their comfort will not expect them to be their own tank heaters.

SILAGE READY WHEN NEEDED Mistaken Idea to Think That Certain Time Must Elapse Before Feeding to Stock.

What is the best time to begin feeding silage, is a question which is interesting many dairy farmers.

The specialists on live stock feeding say that the time to begin using silage is when the dairyman needs it; they feel there is no justification for REAL VALUE OF DAIRY COW Most Reliable Method is to Figure Her Actual Butterfat Production by Weight.

The most reliable way of getting at the real value of a dairy cow is to figure her actual butterfat production. This can be done by weighing the milk produced by each cow and by determining the per cent of butterfat through occasional tests of the milk with a Babcock tester.

WILL CUT POST OFFICE STOCKS Department Announces Move to Cut Down the Burglaries of Smaller Offices.

Washington.—To check the prevalence of burglaries of the smaller and less protected post offices, the Post Office department announced it had decided to reduce the stocks of stamps in those offices to a minimum.

This has been made possible through the adoption of a policy by which large stocks of stamps are kept at central accounting offices in each state by which they can reach any office within the state within 24 hours. Heretofore the stamp supplies have had to be sent from Washington.

Popcorn and Pink Lemonade

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD
(©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Well," said Uncle Jack at the breakfast table, as he unfolded his napkin with one flick, "I suppose next week I have to make a sacrifice of myself, neglect my business, and waste the whole of a rare June afternoon. How about it, Billy?"

His young nephew, at the sound of his name, lifted uncomprehending eyes from his maternal egg-toast-coconut combination. "What you say, Uncle Jack?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing. Nothing at all. At least, nothing of importance. I merely remarked"—here this exasperating young man paused, then added impressively—"that the circus, the really, truly circus, stupendous, unparalleled—" "Circus, Uncle Jack? Circus? Oh, gosh, Uncle Jack, going to take me?"

Now the reader must be immediately disabused regarding Uncle Jack's apparent reluctance to go to the circus. Uncle Jack would rather go to the circus than do almost anything else, unless it were to spend the equivalent hours in the company of Miss Caroline Prescott—an alternative, however, which was out of the question.

For only yesterday Jack with considerable vehemence for him, had told that tantalizing young woman that he was beastly sick of being fifth vice president in the firm of devoted Fetch & Carriers for her ladyship and was ready to sell out all shares at once to the latest comer. Caroline had returned a retort discourteous, and another one of the vice presidents arriving inopportunely, Jack had taken an abrupt departure.

Now the question reasonably arises as to just why Jack should have expected any special consideration. He did so on the grounds of having acquired Caroline ever since he had first held her miniature umbrella over her head on the way to kindergarten and of having asked her to marry him semi-annually ever since she was seventeen and he nineteen—some five or six years ago. But with each passing year she had added new charms and pliancies which attracted new admirers until it looked as if her old-time companion would be crowded out of the running.

So much for the preliminaries which helped to bring about Billy's circus trip. Sailor-suited and exuberant, he trotted along by his uncle's side and explored the dusty environs of the grounds, poked peanuts at the trunk-waving elephants, gazed rapturously at South American anteaters and Australian marsupials suddenly and unscientifically become neighbors, and finally in the awed silence of expectancy, entered the big tent and headed for grandstand seats.

"Wait, uncle. There's Jean. Wait, Uncle Jack!"

"Now Bill, if we expect to get our seats before someone else does—never sat in my own seat at a circus yet, Bill!"

For Billy was tugging backward at his uncle's hand. "Wait for Jean. She's hurrying like everything. Her Aunt Caroline—"

At the name, Jack halted abruptly, and somewhere in the back of his mind an association of ideas began to form. Jean—Caroline's niece! Yes, there they were, sure enough, although from Caroline's unconcern he felt sure she had not seen him. Fresh and cool in green linen and wide hat. Lord! how attractive she was and what a darn shame he couldn't follow his impulse to rush wildly over. Yet dignity demanded that he stick by his guns.

Through the performance which followed, Jack was quite as conscious that Caroline was sitting directly in back of him, three rows up, as if he had had eyes in the back of his head, or as if Billy hadn't told him. He held himself stiffly and refused to relax even at the utmost efforts of near-human monkeys or bouncing clowns. Why had Caroline come to the circus without bringing along at least one of her escorts?

The afternoon seemed as long to Jack as it was brief for Billy, but the moment finally arrived when the last chariot race had been won, the spangled beauty had defied death and the laws of gravity for the last time, and the greatest show on earth, in a blare of trumpets, was over until evening.

Jack rose, determined not to glance around, yet somehow or other in the slowly-moving crowd jamming the aisles he managed to keep always in sight a bit of green linen. Half-way to the entrance one of those inexplicable occurrences took place which arise from very small beginnings. A muffled explosion from an automobile outside, the roar of a hungry lion in its cage—something alarmed the mob at one of the exits. Immediately the spirit of panic permeated the atmosphere. People who had been patiently waiting space to move, pressed forward. Common sense indicated that in a moment the place couldn't help but empty itself. Yet in that moment how much could happen!

Somehow, Jack got Billy on his shoulder, elbowed a bit ahead, and slipped his arm about a figure in green linen. "Keep tight hold of the youngster," he urged, and managed to draw the two of them out on to a row of seats.

"There! That's better!" he said. "Although the trouble's over, I imagine." Then he began to feel em-

TABLE DECORATIONS

It is a bad plan that admits of no modifications.—Publius Syrus.

IT HAS been said that decorative flowers are even more important in the arrangement of the dinner table than the knives and forks; and true it is that the wise hostess takes as much thought in arranging her centerpiece as in seeing that the silver is freshly polished and properly arranged.

A fat pocketbook is not the only thing needed to make a tasteful floral arrangement on the dinner table. In fact, one need have very little money to spend in order to make an attractive and tasteful arrangement. An over-elaborate arrangement is no longer in good taste. Towering floral structures that really look like nothing so much as the more self-conscious East, are roaring "close" harmony at the other. To anyone accustomed to the stern monotony of Cambridge or Princeton, it is like a scene from a musical comedy.—Arthur Ruhl in Harper's.

Giant Butterflies.

It is said that in the northern part of New Guinea there are butterflies so large that the natives hunt them with the bow and arrow. They belong to the species Troides chlamera and they are not only among the largest, but among the rarest butterflies in the world. Some specimens measure eleven and one-half inches across the wings.

Monosyllable Language.

In the monosyllable languages the words are composed of simple monosyllabic roots isolated, and, as a rule, independent of one another. In this elementary form of language, the root words correspond in their essence with general conceptions only, and are unrestricted by any notions of person, gender, number, time, mood, or relationship.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a man like this ever proposed to you?

Symptoms: He doesn't smoke, he doesn't drink, he doesn't like cards. He always has milk toast for breakfast—and hot milk to drink. He walks with a girlish glide, and has a condescending smile. He is really awfully thoughtful and you like it, and he has been a very adorable son to his widowed mother. He has a medium good job and he is quite satisfied with it, but talks about all the big folk in other bigger jobs as if he were sorry for them.

True Way to Make Discoveries.

"Never refuse to see what you do not want to see or which might go against your own cherished hypothesis or against the views of authorities. These are just the clues to follow up, as is also and emphatically so the thing you have never seen or heard of before. The thing you cannot get a pigeonhole for is the finger point showing the way to discovery."

A Property Car.

"You'll never make a motor salesman."

"Why not, sir?"

"You tried to sell that movie actor a flivver, instead of showing him the most expensive cars we carry."

"Don't misjudge me, boss. He just wanted something on four wheels to drive over a cliff."

In work or play, it gives the poise and steadiness that mean success.

It helps digestion, allays thirst, keeps the mouth cool and moist, the throat muscles relaxed and pliant and the nerves at ease.

Man and the Flowers.

The fragrance of plants is not for man's pleasure; it is a means of attracting insects to fertilize them. The object of many present-day florists is to improve a flower in its coloring, size and substance—in short to "paint the lily." They cannot improve the fragrance, which is perhaps the reason they seem to care so little for its disappearance under their handling.—Exchange.

Birds and Animals Exterminated.

Louis Agassiz Fuertes, the well-known naturalist, says that about fifty species of birds and animals have been exterminated in the United States, while several others are on the verge of extermination. The buffalo (or bison) is not extinct, there being nearly 70,000 living buffaloes in the United States today.

Birds' Attitude in Sleep.

That Word "Saffron."

The word "saffron" comes into the English dictionary from the Arabic. The Arabs use the word "zafaran" to designate a species of crocus with light purple flowers which develop in autumn. The plant grows in parts of Asia and in the south of Europe.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

That's the Trouble.

A road hog can't decide which half of the road he wants to use.—Nashville Tennessean.
