W. E. Wilson Dead

Shortly after their arrival home from Portland last Friday evening after a few day's visit with their parents and on business, R. E. Wilson received a telephone message announcing the death of his father, W. E. Wilson. Mr. Wilson had suffered a paralytic stroke about a year ago, from which he had not entirely recovered, but was in ordinarily good health. He has several time been a Maupin visitor, and seldom are father and son more devoted to each other than were W. E. and R. E. Wilson. O. E. Renick drove the car for Mr. Wilson Saturday morning on their return to Portland.

Dam Under Construction

The dam across the spring branch a few yards below the present W. H. Staats summer cottage has the past week made a very visible start on construction. Woodcock Bros. have been hauling lumber and cement, also several tons of steel beams and most of this is up in the shape of framework for the dam which will be about 20 feet high, more than ten feet thick at the most narrow point, the top.

The skeleton of I beam steel is each piece imbedded in a base of concrete reaching six feet beneath the base of the dam, arranged one of these every eight feet and braced with angles of like steel also anchored in this way. On this will be constructed a double wall of two inch plank treated with asphalt and the space between the walls filled with concrete.

This seemingly formidable structure will then be reinforced with a stone fill 30 feet wide at the base and ten feet at the top.

The HOME PHYSICIAN AND GUIDE TO HEALTH

This work every home can afford and should have.

It is a popular treatise on the cause and prevention of disease. The volume is not intended to take the place of the family physician, but to enable the reader to cooperate with him in an intelligent way. Little has been said about medicine in the cure of disease. This is in harmony with the latest findings of medical men who are turning from drugs to Nature's methods. The score and more of contributors to this book, each a specialist in the subject upon which he writes, who have studied the home and know its needs, makes this the most practical and up-to-date medical book published. Illustrated with 16 plates in color and more than 220 other drawings and photographs 872 pages.

Everything for the Table

We are receiving fresh peaches daily from the De Camp-Greene and Richard Johnson orchards. We have contracted the crops on both orchards. Will be prepared to fill your orders with nice fresh stuff at the right price. We will be pleased to receive your orders now and fill them as the peaches ripen.

We have also contracted the L. D. Kelly tomato crop. The crop will not be as large as last year, and will be several days before they are ripe.

Tomatoes will be very scarce due to the Blite which is blighting the crops in all the states. A LITTLE ADVICE—Buy your canned tomatoes NOW for next year.
