grounds, and with that, along with other home dwellers on his street, he is likely to feel that he is doing all that may reasonably be expected of him in the line of city beautification.

On the other hand, he has a lively sense of the possible cost of community activity in a similar direction, and while "theoretically" he approves the idea—not only from a vague sense of the pleasures which such beautification would yield him, but also, because of an instinct that aesthetic values have a genuine advertising, hence commercial, value for his community,—still, he has more than a slumbering consciousness that such pleasures will be reflected in tax statement. He lacks a method of determining his own particular share, in dollars, of the return to the community through the assumed profitableness of the indirect advertising, or "publicity" such enterprises afford.

As things go, almost every community is periodically bitten with a desire to shine a bit brighter in the galaxy of "progressive" commonwealths. After an "insensitive drive," cleanliness and a degree of orderliness, some planting of trees and shrubs is brought about by appeal to the pride of citizens, and by the inoculation of school children with that spirit which will flower into a legitimate and conscious civic pride.

But the acute incentive passes and, while in most instances a residuum of accomplishment leaves things upon a slightly higher plane, much of the benefit of the passing enthusiasm is lost during the ensuing period of inaction. The fact is that what every body's business is nobody's business; with an uninterrupted series of demands upon the altruistic instincts for community service in a variety of fields, each in turn—city beautification along with the rest—suffers relapse or final extinction.

Such methods are not the business-like way of getting results in the shape of a constantly improving business and commercial reputation for a city, or town, or even for the countryside. They are too uncertain, to inefficient, too likely to be unused altogether for indefinite periods. If city beautification is believed to be desirable, as of more than passing interest for the dabbler in civic matters, it should be regarded as a real, live function of the city or municipality. It should be accepted in earnest as an essential part of the city business and be conducted in a businesslike fashion.

Now, Oregon has made provision for the genuinely progressive and ripe-conscious communities in the State, whereby they can enter upon a continuing program for improving their localities. A law has been enacted providing that "the city council, board of trustees or other legislative body of any incorporated city or town in the State of Oregon may, by ordinance, create a city planning commission for such city or town." It is provided that it shall be composed of the Mayor and other city officials and a certain number of appointees of the Mayor from outside the personnel of the municipal government. This commission, made up of interested individuals who have no other public work making demands upon their time as well as of public officials who are at hand to serve not only as advisors but also as contacts with the administrative department of the city government, should be in a fair way to make consistent of a permanent sort for the profitable, businesslike, as well as aesthetic advantage of the city.

Such a state law makes possible the centralization of responsibility for local progress in a city's physical development; it secures to interested citizens an authority to whom they may present ideas and proposals for particular betterments; it brings an important city business under proper business management and direction which is a great advance over the formless, inefficient processes hitherto of necessity employed. Such commissions are authorized only to suggest, or recommend, improvements, but for the carrying out of their recommendations the council, in its hoped-for wisdom, would be likely to provide adequate funds. Nothing, at the present time, would do more to advance inter-

The seedsmen are now sending to homes their highly colored seed and flower catalogues. This ought to inspire us to participation in a campaign for more flower gardens, both in Maupin and the Flat. Maupin may be made a veritable paradise, if everybody will take some industry and expand a little energy in beautifying the home premises. There is the widest range for the man or woman who would grow flowers here. Nearly all perennials do well. A profusion of blooms may be made to smile at those who motor along our highways from the first spring sunshine until a nipping frost withers the posies. Climatic and soil conditions are ideal for nearly any species of flower that one may name. Many homes have ideal locations for the so called rock gardens. The opportunities for landscaping are unlimited. Let's make a beginning now with plans for a Maupin beautiful.

Educational Conference

Oregon Argicultural College, —The Maupin high school has been asked to send a representative to the public speaking contest which will be one feature of the educational exposition February 22 and 23. The O. A. C. chamber of commerce is conducting this contest. Chambers of commerce in all parts of the state are planning to arrange for special booths to show the community industry. Arrangements to entertain 400 high school students at the exposition have been made by the housing committee.

An educational guidance conference for high school representatives will be held. Thomas A. Clark, dean of men at the University of Illinois, and Dr. Glendine Snow of Michigan Normal school, will be the principal speakers. Each high school in the state has been invited to send five delegates and one faculty advisor to the exposition and the educational conference.

Each Oregon town entering a booth in the exposition will be allowed one of the smaller rooms in the commerce building or one half of one of the larger rooms for its display. Many chambers of commerce have signified their intention of sending displays. Milking contests and guessing contests are among the special features planned by the school of agriculture. A milking contest between A. B. Cordley, dean of agriculture, and department heads is creating much interest.

BEFORE THE STATE ENGINEER OF OREGON

Deschutes and other Counties

IN THE MATTER OF THE DETERMINATION OF THE RELATIVE RIGHTS TO THE USE OF THE WATERS OF DESCHUTES RIVER AND ITS TRIBUTARIES, A TRIBUTARY OF COLUMBIA RIVER.

TO Each and Every Claimant to the use of Water from Deschutes River or any tributary thereof:

IN THE NAME OF THE STATE OF OREGON: You are hereby notified that all statements and proofs of claim and other evidence heretofore submitted by the various claimants to the use of the waters of Deschutes River and its tributaries WILL BE OPEN TO PUBLIC INSPECTION as follows:

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 25th, 26th and 27th days of February, 1924, in the Circuit Court Room of the County Court House at Bend, Oregon

On Thursday, the 28th day of February, 1924, in the Circuit Court Room of the County Court House at Madras, Oregon.

On Friday, the 29th day of February, 1924, at the Bank in Maupin, Oregon.

And for a period of 60 days beginning with Monday, the 3rd day of March, 1924, and ending with Tuesday, the 1st day of April, 1924, at the office of the State Engineer in the Capitol Building, Salem, Oregon.

AND YOU ARE HEREBY FURTHER NOTIFIED that the final decrees entered in the matters of the determination of the relative rights to the use of the waters of White River, Trout Creek, Crooked River, Squaw Creek, Tumalo Creek, and Paulina Lake & Creek, fixing and determining the relative rights to the use of the waters of said streams, as between the parties thereto, will also be open to public inspection at the times and places above designated. (This notice is given in accordance with the provisions of Section 5752 Oregon Laws, as amended by Chapter 283, Laws of Oregon for 1923, under which law opportunity is given for contests by claimants on such tributary streams against parties who have filed claims in this present proceeding, or vice versa; the purpose being to make all users of the waters of Deschutes River and its tributaries parties to this proceeding, so that after final determination in this proceeding the water rights on the entire river may be administered as one stream system.)

Said evidence and claims will be kept open to inspection at said times and places from 9 A. M. to 12 M. and from 1:30 P. M. to 4 P. M. of each of said days (Sundays and holidays excepted)

All parties claiming water rights from Deschutes river or any tributary thereof should appear at one of the times and places above named and examine the claims and other evidence of water rights to the use of the waters of said streams.

AND YOU ARE HEREBY FURTHER NOTIFIED that the determination of the State Engineer in this matter will be heard by the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Deschutes County.

WITNESS MY HAND this 5th day of February, 1924, at Salem, Oregon.

Rhea Luper,
State Engineer.
