Norway to Celebrate 900 Years of Christianity

Christians.—The nine hundredth anniversary of the official establishment of Christianity in Norway is to be celebrated during June.

It was in the year 1042 that the first acceptance of Christian doctrines and their embodiment in the religious laws took place at the little stone church of Moster, situated on an island in the sea channel between Hauge and Bergen.

The anniversary will be accompanied by many festivities and ceremonies of historical interest, and it is expected that the king of Norway will attend.

Then the Tragedy.
"De Lawd made you an' me an' de snows," said Charcoal Eph, ruminatively, "an' He didn' make no mis takes outwelf He stahed you an' me."

Why She Liked Rainy Days

By JANE OSBORN
(©, 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Sue Stowe was a matchmaking sister. For some reason she seemed to fear lest her brother Martin should be left blooming alone on the family tree, a withered and crabbled dried apple of an old bachelor, so she began when she was eighteen and he was twenty-two bringing home every girl she knew who was, according to her own opinion, the kind of girl that Martin might like. Her possible sisters-in-law were numerous and varied. But to Martin there was a monotony about them—that is, until he met Edith Nicholas. Edith was different. By this time Martin was twenty-five and Sue was a senior in college. Edith, also a senior in college, came home with Sue on a holiday and for four or five days the progress of the friendship between Edith and Martin seemed to be following the line of a glorious crescendo that would broaden out into a real and glowing love. Sue always liked to think of love in this way—as something glorious and ennobling that transfigured those it rested upon. She was quite convinced that when Martin did become actually engaged to Edith he'd give up some of his "horrid little" tricks, like dumping his pipe into the open fireplace, regardless of whether or not there was a fire on the hearth—entering the house by way of the kitchen entry and carrying on long and hilarious conversations there with the old Irish cook, who retained her County Cork brogue in spite of her twenty years in the Stowe kitchen.

All was going beautifully as far as the friendship between Martin and Edith was concerned and Sue was watching for indications of the budding of real love. But the powers that rule the weather had other ideas. Martin and Sue and Edith had planned to motor along the River road to a little tea room where they might sit and watch the setting sun and drink tea. Sue did hope that Martin wouldn't ask for ice cream—it was so crude to eat ice cream when convention dictated tea.

"We just can't go," Sue told her brother when he came into the living room through the kitchen entrance. "Gosh," said Martin. "I left the office early just go. The rain won't kill you. It's good for you—"

Edith smiled as winsomely as possible. "Oh, I just can't endure to get my feet wet and I think it's so dismal being out in the rain." She had rather wanted to have Martin remark that her feet weren't much to get wet or something to that effect. But, instead, he looked at her as he might have looked at his own sister.

"You can wear rubbers and a rain coat, can't you?" he asked. "We'll be dry in the car—you'll only have to make a dash for the tea house—"

"Oh, let's just stay here where it's nice and comfy, and have a hand of dummy bridge," suggested Edith. "A man doesn't like to play bridge in the afternoon," he said. "I'll be running on back to the office and get some more work done," and before Sue could make her protestations effective he had disappeared again through the kitchen passageway.

It must have been cleverly arranged by fate, for just as Martin Stowe was going down the street he encountered Marty Hale. Marty Hale was walking and she looked very gay and debonair in spite of the downpour. She wore a navy blue raincoat and a rainhat stuck with a bit of a red quill, and she carried a dainty blue umbrella with a red handle. Martin even noticed that her rubber sandals fitted her oxfords to perfection. The rain had brought out the delicate rose tints in her face and the mist had made her blue eyes bluer than the breast of a blue jay.

Martin recalled that on other rainy days he had seen this same girl walking as now, perfectly dressed for the inclement weather and apparently not the least bit inclined to give up her unusual occupations because of the rain. So somehow a very peculiar thing happened. In the niche in his mind where Martin had for a few days been keeping a rather hazy image of Edith with the lily-eyed brown eyes and ash blonde hair the vision of this rainy-day girl now appeared.

When Martin returned home for dinner instead of experiencing the thrill that he had the night before just to sit next to Edith he glanced at her critically, as he might have at his own sister. He thought her eyes were dull and her face pale for lack of outdoor air. She had probably stayed home all day because she didn't want to go out in the rain.

It was not difficult to arrange an introduction to the rainy-day girl. It happened one rainy morning on the street corner when a neighbor, Mrs. Hawkins, who knew them both, presented Martin to Marty Hale.

Martin called on his rainy-day girl, choosing a rainy day for his call. He found her about to go out and at her suggestion started out on a walk through the spring mist with her. It was just a pleasant sort of drizzle, all warm and humid, that brought up all sorts of fragrances from the earth and trees and hedges.

When he suggested that she permit him to take her out to the River road tea house some afternoon in his car she suggested that they go the next rainy day.

"There is never a crowd on rainy days—and I like it."

Martin was delighted. He thought resentfully of the time he had spent with Edith—Edith whom he had come very near to liking—Edith whom he had nearly kissed. How much sweeter would be the kiss of his rainy-day girl—and how wonderful to have the first kiss all misty with rain. Perhaps on their way home he could get her to take a little stroll down by the river and there under the protection of some tree or other he could have that kiss—all cool and fragrant and rain covered.

Marty Hale agreed to the walk by the river and just as Martin had plotted her under the protection of a grand old elm tree and was about to start the preliminaries of the kiss the pitter of rain became louder and just as he had put his arm around her trim little rain-coated shoulders and was about to snatch the kiss he coveted the rain descended so forcefully that elm leaves and branches did not hold it back. The kiss that Martin had thought of as being humid was actually very, very much saturated with rain and there were huge drops of rain splashing on Marty's nose and fresh pink cheeks as she looked up at him and smiled.

"I wouldn't have let you do that—if it hadn't been raining," she said. "But somehow it seems different out here—" Marty hadn't a very definite idea of what she meant nor had Martin, but both were delighted with the little speech. To make the kiss quite all right Martin asked Marty to marry him, and before they had got back into his waiting car on the River road Marty had said she would.

"I hope we shall have a rainy day for the wedding," said Martin, a week before Marty was to become Mrs. Stowe.

"It won't so much matter now," laughed Marty. "I have a charming going-away frock. You know, Martin, I really think I ought to confess, The reason I always went out in the rain is because all last winter and spring I didn't have anything decent to wear except my rainy-day outfit. So whenever I went anywhere I chose a rainy day." She saw the look of disappointment in Martin's face. "But, of course, I like rain," she fibbed. As a matter of fact she disliked going out in the rain as much as Edith.

Winnebago Indians Were Fond of Fancy Clothes

As clothing the early Winnebago wore a breechcloth, moccasins, leggings and robes of dressed skins. Simple fabrics of bark fiber and rushes were probably also worn. The advent of the French trader added to their dress, but at all times we find both men and women combing their hair straight back, parted in the middle and tied behind their heads in braids, later decorated by ribbons, writes the Wisconsin Magazine.

Thomas Anderson, who spent a winter trading with them on the Rock river in 1802, said that they were the most filthy, most obstinate and bravest people of any Indian tribe. When the French came they added blankets to their garb, white for winter and bright colors for the summer.

In the governor's reception room in the state capitol at Madison the surrender of the noted Chief Red Bird, which ended the Winnebago war in 1825, is cleverly depicted. Red Bird, the prisoner, is pictured as having one side of his face painted red, the other intermixed with green and white, clothed in a Yankton suit of dressed elk skin, perfectly white and as soft as a kid glove.

It consisted of a jacket, ornamented with a fringe of the same material, the sleeves being cut to fit his finely formed arms and the leggings also of dressed elk skin, with a fringe of the same material and enriched with blue beads.

On his feet he wears moccasins, and on each shoulder, in place of an epaulet, is fastened a stuffed red bird. Around his neck hang strands of wampum of various lengths, and he holds a war pipe in his hand, ornamented with dyed horse hair and feathers of birds. Here we have the Winnebago dandy.

Chinese Movies Ancient

The prince of Wales, addressing a convention of motion picture producers, called attention to the fact that the Chinese over 3,000 years ago had motion pictures and exhibited them at entertainments, says the Detroit News. The Chinese had two forms of motion pictures. In one the pictures were painted on long rolls of paper similar to the photographic films of today and these were slowly drawn out in a lantern-like box where they were viewed through a slit or eye port.

A commoner type and one of probably much greater antiquity was made by arranging a number of pictures on square or oblong wooden or pasteboard disks, stringing these on two endless ropes or twine and moving them round two end cylinders. The disks were often placed one on the other four or five deep.

Optical illusions similar to those made in the modern projection theater were obtained by Chinese showmen long before the Christian era by carefully regulating the speed of the motion pictures and the lighting of the theaters.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

John Day.—The Ellison-White Chautauqua will be in Prairie City from July 6 to 10. An excellent program has been provided for the season and full support has been pledged to the cause by neighboring towns.

Wheeler.—The town of Brighton, which was virtually destroyed by fire April 7, has practically been rebuilt. New structures are rising constantly. Twenty-eight buildings went up in flames, but most of them have been replaced.

Pendleton.—The erection of a clubhouse and the creation of an artificial lake at Meacham as a memorial to the late President Harding is a plan that is being fostered by A. F. Alexander of Walla Walla, one of the publishers of the Up-to-the-Times magazine.

Eugene.—The new stage terminal hotel being erected on Willamette street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues by W. E. Powell and Mayor E. B. Parks is expected to be opened to the public about June 15, according to the announcement of the builders.

Gaston.—Gaston is to have a tourist free automobile camp. Postmaster Porter has donated the use of some acreage on the Tualatin near the concrete bridge on the highway at the north end of town and the work of clearing away the brush is being done by interested citizens.

Baker.—One of the most unusual cases filed here recently was that of Claude Officer against E. E. Augustus, for $1925 over the payment of sheep. Officer bought the band of sheep he now owns from Augustus and at the time of delivery a count was made which he said to be wrong.

Salem.—There were 154 arrests with fines aggregating more than $2800 during the month of April, as the result of the activities of the state traffic officers. This was set out in a report prepared here Saturday by T. A. Rafferty, inspector for the law-enforcement bureau of the state motor vehicle department.

John Day.—Leet Vaughan of the John Day high school has made a record killing during the last two weeks, having to his credit 1300 squirrels. The bounty received will assist him materially in his expenses next year while continuing his high school course. He is the smallest youngster in any high school in Oregon.

Prineville.—Fire Saturday destroyed the Motor Inn garage, with an estimated loss of $5000 to building and contents. The garage was operated by Major W. A. Raray. The loss was partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire was a mystery, as workmen had left the building less than 15 minutes before the alarm was sounded.

Oregon City.—Mrs. Grant B. Dimick, wife of ex-County Judge Dimick, fugitive from justice, Saturday afternoon filed in the Clackamas county circuit court suit for divorce. She charges in her complaint cruel and inhuman treatment, forgery and disgrace to herself and asks that she be awarded one-third of the large estate owned by her husband.

Hood River.—The apple growers' association, which has opened a free employment agency for berry growers, has announced that wages will be paid this season as follows for strawberry harvest hands: Ten cents a carrier of six hallowcks for pickers, with a bonus of 2 cents a carrier for those who remain throughout the season, and 18 cents a crate for packers, with a 4-cent bonus.

Salem.—Members of the state board of control will hold a special meeting here this week when some action probably will be taken on the purchase of a site for the proposed new state training school for boys. Purchase of a site has been hanging fire for more than two years because of the inability of the board members to agree on a tract suitable for the institution.

Salem.—Acting in compliance with an order issued by the state fair board at its May meeting, all gates leading to the fair grounds have been provided with locks and will remain closed to the public until the foot and mouth disease now raging in the state of California is under control. As a further precaution against the foot and mouth menace a fence is being constructed around the camping grounds.

Brownsville.—Without Uncle Sam Barger, Brownsville is hardly Brownsville or Mr. Barger has been identified with the city for a half century and more, and was, when he went away, one of the oldest men in it, having attained 88 years. Mr. Barger has gone to Vancouver, Wash., where he will spend the remaining days of his life at the Knights of Pythias home recently erected and dedicated. He is one of the two living charter members of the Brownsville lodge.

Have You a Cough? Here's How to Get Rid of the Cough and Rebuild the Body

Portland, Ore.—"A few years ago I caught a bad cold which settled on my lungs and in the bronchial tubes. I had a severe cough, and became so bad that for six weeks I could not lie down, would have to sit up in a morris chair. I doctored but did not get any better. I was 'all in' physically, and began myself to think there was no help for me, when I was advised by one of my doctors to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine so completely relieved me of my trouble that I have never had any return of it. My lungs and bronchials are strong and never give me any trouble."—Mrs. Audrey Savin, 693 Tacoma Ave.

Obtain this "Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's in tablets or liquid at your nearest drug store and you'll quickly find that it builds you up, besides correcting your distress.

Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice. Send 10c for trial pkg. tablets.
