WELCOME TO THE FOLD

L. C. Bleim and D. C. Evans made their editorial bow to the people of Dufur in last week's Dispatch, they having acquired the interest of A. Y. Zoller and Herman Vieth in that paper.

Both gentlemen are well and favorably known in this section, and that they have launched upon the journalistic sea shows their faith in the city of Dufur. That place is a live, up-to-date little city, peopled by real Americans who take pride in their town and its business. The city needs a live newspaper and the new publishers are men well equipped from a writing standpoint to keep up their end of the town's advancement.

Here's our Bros. Bleim and Evans; get out and hustle, give your readers local news, and all of it, and you will soon be riding on the top of the wave of success.

A GOOD EXAMPLE

A man named Neff was tried in an Oklahoma court recently on a charge of reckless driving. He drove his car into another one and he killed a man, and the jury, refusing to be swayed by sentimental bunk, found him guilty. The judge sentenced him to 12 years in the penitentiary. Twelve years is a long time, but think how long his victim will be dead. An automobile is just as dangerous as an automatic pistol, when in the hands of a reckless driver, and it can kill just as quickly. We know that a jury of Maupin men would not acquit the reckless pistol user who killed another—and we believe the time is fast approaching when they will mete out heavy punishment to auto drivers who slay through recklessness. The Oklahoma jury that agreed that Neff is a bad kind of citizen to be driving the highways has set a good example for other juries, in every state in the union.

USELESS THRIFT

We read in a daily paper a few days ago of an Ohio man who died recently after living for 55 years on a small farm. In settling his estate it was found he had $2900 deposited in the bank, and $80,000 in cash held in fruit cans secreted about his home.

Here is a man who, from every indication, was frugal, industrious, intelligent and thrifty. He had to have those qualities to accumulate that amount of money on a small farm remote from the city and in a section where opportunities were few. Yet, because he did not trust his fellowman, almost $40 of every dollar he had was idle when it could have been earning interest for him. In fact, that $80,000 deposited in an Ohio saving bank paying 6 percent would have brought him an income of $4800 a year, or more than he could have earned in any year by hard work on his farm.

He was, in a way, like a number of people we know of around Maupin. He couldn't be called a miser, because he did not realize the earning power of money. He put it where it would not grow and reproduce; he deprived himself of the enjoyment of his savings. Then he died without having derived a penny's worth of benefit from it. Here is as strong an argument in favor of starting a savings account as we have ever come across, and we hope and trust that it will impress those who read this article the same way it has impressed us.

The only member of the family who can get madder than the woman who is asked to buy less is the daughter who is asked to wear more.

The man who deliberately drives on the wrong side of the road is inviting trouble—for himself and the other fellow as well.

We know of two things that depend entirely upon faith and love for their success. One is democracy and the other is hash.

Uncle Sam is going to abolish rub alcohol. Pretty soon everybody in this country will be so dry their joints will creak.

Any Maupin man can tell you that a new seed catalogue and a warm kitchen stove are almost as good as summer itself.

U. S. Enderby was in Maupin a short time Tuesday while on his way to The Dalles for medical treatment for an injured leg.

Picked Up About Town

It has been our observation that most men need higher moral courage than they need high foreheads.

Bill Staats remarks that "the trouble with the world is there are too many people who want to live better lives without living better lives."

Hurstel Hollis says that about the only result he ever obtained in trying to kill two birds with one stone was to lose the stone.

"I often wonder," remarks Richmond, "what become of the old-fashioned woman who used to ask before she started down town if her petticoat showed."

"It seems to me," says Gus Derthick, "that what Portland needs is fewer night clubs and more night sticks."

That rancher who is advertising wood for sale now evidently believes in preparing for the worst.

Now that most men are wearing belts we wonder what those women who are effecting suspenders will do when their dress supporters break down.

"That old superstition of the groundhog has been shattered, as the March weather so far shows," comments Harve Morris as he views the many acres turned over this spring.

The baseball game at Wapinitia Sunday drew a crowd from here. After watching the game a short time John Confer remarked: "Well Maupin had a real team at one time."

Another Boy

Another prospective voter was added to Maupin's population on Wednesday. He came to the A. T. Lindley home and tipped the beam at seven pounds. All O. K.

Will Be Milkmaid

Link Harpham came up from The Dalles yesterday will, return there tomorrow. He has leased a ranch opposite Cascade Locks, taking possession June 1. Link will soon be in shape to hold a pail between his knees and 'pail' a flock of cows.
