"System" Fell Down

Johnson prides himself on having a "system" for betting on the races that can't be beat. He frequently makes queer bets and sometimes that god of chance that favors those who rush in where angels are conspicuous by their absence smiles upon him. But the other day he tried one and failed. There was a four-horse race and Johnson conceived the brilliant idea of betting on each of the four horses to win. Perhaps he didn't stop to think that it would take a 4 to 1 shot winner for him to break even. In any event, at the last moment there was an added starter—and the added starter won. Johnson doesn't think so much of his system.

To Renovate Velvet

When renovating velvet brush out all the dust. Hold the right side over steam until quite moist and iron on wrong side, or the velvet can be thoroughly brushed on right side and stains removed, then moistened on wrong side and ironed. Never lay velvet down when ironing. Stand the iron firmly on end, or have some one hold it for you, and, holding the velvet taut with both hands, pass it across the iron, having back of velvet against iron. If the garment is large it may be more convenient to fasten one end firmly, or have an assistant hold it, then holding the other end tightly, up high, with your left hand iron it on wrong side. This treatment will make velvet look like new.—Kansas City Star

Fear Was a Friend

A few weeks before his death Lord Leverhulme, in his presidential address to the Institute of Certified Grocers at Scarborough, said that he felt sure that the greatest help to any of them was fear, and that fear had been his best friend. His first recollection was fear. He had fear of continuing a clerk at his father's business, and that fear persuaded his father to put him on the road as a commercial traveler at the age of nineteen. He married at the age of twenty-two, and then fear came as to whether the profits would keep a wife. Later fear drove him into soap. His soap, widely advertised, was floated as a company in 1894. In the words of one of his numerous obituaries: "The years that followed marked the growth of a business ideal that was almost-epic in its triumphs and ramifications."—Spectator, London.

Jay Walker to Blame for Half of the Deaths by Auto

MANY a motorist whose car has figured in a fatal accident will be able to present a clear sheet to Saint Peter when his time comes, when one considers all the contributing factors outside of the driver's own fault. A total of 1,390 auto fatalities on record with the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, covering a period of seven months, shows that in 727 cases the fault was clearly the pedestrian's and cannot be put down to the driver, the weather or unavoidable circumstances. The careless pedestrian's footsteps lead him to the grave by six distinct routes, says the Safety Council, and the most travel-worn of these is jaywalking. Sixty-two per cent of the 727 auto fatalities just referred to were due to strutting across busy streets without using the intersections. Children's playing in the streets was responsible for 31 per cent and coasting for another 3 per cent. Confusion on the part of the pedestrian, not hearing whistles and turning back in his tracks, brought about 9 per cent of these 727 deaths, while physical disability and intoxication rate 3 and 2 per cent respectively.
