BUTLER'S YOUR HOME CROCER

A Merchandising Talk

We opened our Grocery and Meat Market on February 8th, 1922. Since that time we have enjoy d a wonderful business. Our terms were advertised as cash, or all bills due and payable first of the month following purchases. These terms have only been extended to customers who are entitled to credit. Under this arrangement our loss from bad accounts has been less than one-tenth of one per cent of the business we have done.

We feel that when you are trading with us you are not paying the other fellow's bill. We extend the 30-day credit as a matter of courtesy and

We wish to make it easy to trade with us. Our policy has been, and will be, to help you in every way we can. We pay market price-less a small transportation charge-for products you have to sell; if you have no account with us we pay you cash.

We are now conducting two stores; have eliminated heavy freight expense by having our own trucks, which also adds to our service. Our buying power has more than doubled this year, due to heavy sales at both our stores.

We anticipate big business this year. 'At present our sales are greater than last year. Crop prospects were never better. What helps you helps us so let's work together. Spend your money at home. We appreciate your patronage and will hold our prices down to the very lowest margin of profit possible.

Soliciting your future business we are at your service. Command us.

Taking the Profit Out of War

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

Reprinted from The Atlantic Monthly.

So it became evident that the price fixing program had to go even further, and the War Industries Board, when the Armistice came, was proceeding with a campaign to fix the prices of all the basic things that laber had to buy. Some had previously been fixed. I speak of labor in a much broader sense than manual labor, for the unorganized so-called "white collar" part of our community-clerks, teachers, government employees, profeesional men-were less able to meet the situation than labor in the narrower sense. For the protection and relief of such groups certain plans were devised. To illustrate

One of them provided that manufac turers, jobbers and retailers of shoes could make and sell shoes only of a specified quality at a fixed price, effective July, 1919. No one who did not have a card of the War Industries Board in his window could sell shoes. and only the standardized shoes could be sold. No jobber or manufacturer would sell shoes to anybody who did not have this card. The shoes were to be stamped Class A, B or C and had to be of the quality prescribed and sold at the price fixed. The country was so organized in every district that there could be immediately reported to Washington the name of any shoe retailer who did not carry out the regulations of the War Industries Board as to price and quality. Through restrictions on his laber, money, raw materials and transportation so manufacturer would have been permitted to sell to any dealer violating the regulations. The Armistice stopped the execution of this plan. Another plan of this nature: The manufacturers of men's and women's wearing apparel had in 1918 been called to Washington, together with the retailers of various goods, and notified that regulations would have to be made in regard to retail prices and standardization of clothing.

The rulings by the board were made known through the issuance of official bulletins at irregular intervals and were widely distributed by the press. which co-operated in this most necessary work with a whole-hearted purpose that gave to the orders of the War Industries Board the instant and broad circulation they required

If we were to start, in the event of another war, at the place where we were industrially when the World War ended, the Prosident, acting through an agency similar to the War Industries Board, would have the right to fix prices of all things as of a date previous to the declaration of war when there was a fair peace time relationship among the various activities of the nation. It would be illegal to buy, sell, serve or rent at any other. than these prices. Brakes would be applied to every agency of inflation before the hurtful process started. An intelligent control of the flow of men. money and materials would be imposed, instead of having the blind panic heretofore ensuing on the first appearance of the frantic demands of war. The Draft Board would have before it the rulings of the priority committee, together with the estimated needs of every business and profession in its relationship to the conduct of the war, and men would be selected accordingly. The Draft Board could more intelligently decide, with the advice of the priority committee, many of the problems with which it would be faced. There would be no sending of men to the trenches who were needed for expert industrial war work and then bringing them back again. Businesses not necessary to the winning of the war would be curtailed. The Draft Board would have that information before it. The prices of all things being fixed, the price fixing committee would make necessary adjustments, as was done during the war. Under the system used in 1918 these prices were made public and adjusted every three months, so that any consumer or producer had his day in court when he considered prices unfair. Those who complained that during the war prices were too high had this read- recourse to hand.

In the meantime all the industries of the country would have been mobilized by the formation of committees representative of each industry as was done in the World War. Over them would be placed a government director or commodity chief. The various government departments would appoint committees representing their requirements, so that on one committee the resources of the nation would be represented and on the other the demands of the government. The government director would stand between to decide, in conjunction with the priority committee, to what department supplies should go.
