DECORATION DAY

Thinner and thinner grow the ranks of that once vast army that wore the uniform of blue, and once more as the day arrives on which this nation bows in tribute to them we see the wide gaps in their ranks. More than half a century has passed since they went forth to defend the same stary flag we once again unfurl above the heads of the living and once again drape about the silent mounds that shield the dead. And the years that have passed since the day they marched forth with youthful hearts to defend that flag, have served to heal all scars and wounds and to unite all sections into the grandest and most glorious country the world has ever known.

Residents of Maupin come to Decoration Day with loving tears for not only the men who wore the blue, but with loving remembrance of those who are now our brothers even tho they fought for a lost cause. Their sons have shown themselves of our blood, and today on the fields of France and in every cemetery in this nation the sons of both the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray sleep silently side by side after laying down their lives for the same cause. They fought for the nation they loved, and they are loved by that nation because they were big enough to forget sectional lines and political differences.

So we come again to pay homage to our soldier dead, to show them they are not forgotten and that their service to mankind shall never perish from the minds of this generation, and all generations to come. They paved the way for a nation that today stands as an example of greatness for all other nations to emulate. They made it possible for us to live in and to enjoy peace and plenty. And for this we return our sincere thanks with a cheer for those who still remain and a tear for those who have passed on, and with a renewal of our pledge to uphold the flag and the constitution they sacrificed for—a flag that has never known dishonor.

THE BEST OF ALL

We've overheard a conversation between several well-known Maupin men a few days ago, and it is well worth passing on. They were discussing auto trips, and interesting places, and finally one of them said:

"Taking a trip is a fine thing, and every man who owns an auto owes it to himself to take at least one good, long one. Then when he gets back to the old home town he'll know how to appreciate it more than he did before he saw other sections of this country."

And there's a lot of truth in that statement. Other states and towns and cities look good on paper and in the motoring guide books, and other ways of making a living appeal to us while we are reading about them. But a short stay anywhere else will convince you that what you have here is many times better, everything considered, than what you are going to find anywhere else. It costs no more to live here than in other sections, and even if it did—it's worth more. The trouble with the average citizen of this and every other community is that he is so busy believing that the other fellow has the best end of life that he overlooks his own advantages. And nothing will bring those advantages to his attention any quicker than getting out on a trip somewhere and seeing how the other fellow lives.

The morality of our ancestors has been brought out as a topic for argument. How about Adam and Eve. There is no authority for their marriage so far as documentary or historical evidence is concerned. Perhaps their relations were under the cloak of "common law" marriage.

We look to see history repeat itself. Steiwer was elected as the candidate of the Oregonian; but Bert Haney, the democratic candidate, and well known and popular, may step out and take the senatorial toga himself.

Wrigley says the sun never sets on his chewing gum. But how about the son who sits on the cud left on the chair edge by his sister?

Maupin did herself proud at the primary election. The republicans for once cast more votes than did the democrats.

Geo. Magill of Wamic has a sheaf of this year's rye, cut and standing in the house, some of which measures over six feet in height.

The second Maupin nine played a one-sided game with Tygh here Sunday, losing by the score of 11-0.

Yesterday R. Johnson brought to town a few boxes of May Duke cherries, grown on his place below town. These are the first cherries to be grown near and brought to Maupin this season.

The Maupin baseball team went to Antelope Sunday for a game, but rain prevented playing. On the way home one of the cars broke down near Fleming's and the occupants were compelled to spend the night in the barn at that place.

A committee from the school went down the river Saturday to see about clearing a place on which to hold the annual school picnic.

Mrs. R. Johnson brought in some roses, grown by her on her ranch near town, last Tuesday. They were several varieties and several of them measured sixteen and seventeen inches in circumference.

Fred Covey, a graduate-to-be of The Dalles high school next month, has been employed as manager of the Hunt's Ferry warehouse for the next two years.

HOGS

In 1925 Oregon and Washington brought in from the east of the Rocky Mountains, live hogs and pork products to the value of $9,000,000.00

It is estimated that each year, California consumes pork products to the value of $50,000,000.00 of which 90% is brought in from outside that state.

This money is being sent away from the Pacific Coast territory because our farms are not producing sufficient hogs to supply the Pacific Coast market.

Here is a home market for a home product that is being overlooked. A few more hogs on each farm will keep a lot of this money in the west. Think it over.
