The sight of a couple miles of slashing burning at one time was most pleasing to those on the Flat last week, when the brush and timber from the new cutoff was fired. Plenty of help was on hand to see that the fire did not get beyond control and the last vestige of brush was cleared from that section of the right-of-way.

Outside fishermen seem to have taken a tumble to themselves at last. Reports of prime fishing in the Deschutes have proven to be without foundation, and fishermen have, as a consequence, not been so numerous of late.

We have some interesting correspondence from Pine Grove and Ranger Line which we have to carry over to next week
