PAYING THE PREACHER

When one dances one must pay the fiddler, and when one buys merchandise he must pay for same. The rule should apply to the preacher. In many instances congregations are derelict in their obligations to the man who strives to impart moral atmosphere to the place where he ministers and resides. He is one called upon to render solace to the afflicted, to impart advice and to minister to those who are downcast. He studies sermons that he may elucidate God's word and weave a stronger feeling for good. His services are sought to say the last words over the departed, to bless and sanctify the newborn and in all things his help is asked, because he is supposed to be wise in his calling.

In some places remuneration for his services is a thing that is let go by the board. He is sometimes the recipient of a "pound social"—that is he is given what is left after a party gathering has partaken of what is brought as gifts, done up in pound packages; he is "presented" with clothing—often outgrown or too shoddy for the former owner to wear; his family is looked upon as an object of charity and given odds and ends for what some members of his congregation have no further use. He is supposed to receive a stated sum for his work, that to be paid at stated times. But does he always receive the sum? He does not. Cases are known where his congregation seems to be careless of that little item in a preacher's existence. He is ignored when he reminds the stewards of the church that a little change to jingle in his pockets would make life rosier, he is put off with promises and smooth words of later payment. That does not help the preacher's family. For all the church members care he and his family may be in actual need of the necessities of life and he is compelled to work at other things in order that his family might live. A deplorable condition, indeed.

A preacher is as much entitled to his salary as is the school teacher, the public official, the clerk, the hasher and section hand. His work requires years of preparation, the expenditure of a large sum of money that he may prepare himself to fill the position to which he aspires. It is true Jesus Christ refused to accept pay for his services, but He knew his work would live after him, that he was the true prophet of the Almighty and that his remuneration was a better world. In his work as preacher the man who accepts a "call" of the congregation is following in the footsteps of the Great Deliverer. Takes the life and works of the Savior as his compass. He tries to be meek, pure and sincere. He is promised, and should receive the compensation promised, and those congregations who are remiss in meeting their obligations to him would do well to confess bankruptcy, close up their churches and retire from business as believers in and followers of the lowly Nazarene.

The address made by Mr. E. R. Piper, editor of the Oregonian at the dedication of the Crooked River bridge was a poem in blank verse. The speaker described the wonders of Eastern Oregon in language comparable with the words of Longfellow in Evangeline and his laudation of the engineering feat in the construction of the structure demonstrated the intense feeling entertained by him regarding the road program and possibilities of Oregon.

The little boy who asked his grandmother to consult the dictionary to ascertain the source of babies has an educational nucleus in his make-up. In these days the help of a dictionary in the one thing sought when information is desired on any subject, and the lad seemed to sense that that book could inform his grandmother of what she professed to be ignorant of.

Steel tops—on automobiles—are life savers. The fact that their car was of steel construction most likely saved the lives of three ladies on the Criterion hill last Saturday. When the car sloughed a wheel and turned over aside from a few bruises the occupants were uninjured, because the steel frame prevented a total collapse of the top and consequent fatal results.

A paragrapher in the Portland Oregonian says: "It is proposed that the British government tax lipsticks in order to pay off the war debt to America. More than ever we are keen to visit that historic England."

What a kisser that man must be.

Soon the hum of the harvester will be heard in this land. But one thing pleases the wheat grower is that soon the jingle of coin in his pocket will be the result of the hum of the harvester.

Took in Dedication.

The Times family attended the dedication of the Crooked River bridge last Saturday, as also did Ed. Mathews and family. One of the largest crowds ever gathered together on the Dalles-California highway was in attendance. Notables from various sections were there and many of them delivered speeches regarding Oregon's road program and the beauty and usefulness of the great structure spanning Crooked River.

Dufur Hotel Entertains Robbers.

Someone with no respect for the property of others ransacked rooms at the Balch Hotel at Dufur Monday night. Dr. R. W. Christensen, a roomer at the hotel, lost $120.00 and B. F. Walston is out $55.00 as a result in the robber's depredations. Deputy Sheriff Blaser was sent out to try and apprehend the robber, but so far his search has not been prolific of a capture.

Labor Office Opened.

A county labor office has been opened in the office of the county agent, The Dalles, with Mr. H. L. Sexton in charge. His work, which is under direction of the U. S. Department of Labor, will consist chiefly of supplying farm labor. Any desiring farm labor will be supplied by calling Mr. Sexton on phone 277, The Dalles.

Bridge Floor Very Rough.

Isn't it about time the floor of the bridge at this place was treated to new planks? That is a question one hears every day. The present planking is working loose and is as rough as a rasp. A new floor seems to be a necessity, so why delay laying another and better one?

Abbotts Build Road.

J. M. Abbott has had Morris Greene build three-eighths mile of road leading from the ranch to the new cut-off. The new road has been graded and Mr. Abbott has arranged from a contractor on the new state road to gravel it as soon as he can get at the work.

Started Holt Combine.

M. I. Sherarer hitched onto his Holt machine yesterday morning and proceeded with the work of cutting his grain, of which he has about 300 acres.

Eastman kodaks from $2.50 to $17.00 at the Maupin Drug Store. Bring your developing here and it will be attended to at once. An enlargement given free with each 50 cents worth of work brought in.
