The merchant who has goods to sell and wants customers usually uses the columns of the local newspapers to tell about them. He may dress his windows attractively, hang placards in front of his store and send out circulars. He is bound to get a certain amount of trade as a result. But the merchant who advertises in the local paper reaches a greater number of readers than he possibly could any other way. He has a story to tell. The readers of the paper read every word of it; they are looking for certain goods and when the merchant tells them he has what they want it naturally follows that he draws their trade his way. People read the advertisements; they have learned that by so doing they save money and are able to obtain just what they want when they want it. Being penny wise and pound foolish in the matter of advertising has caused many a merchant to seek cover under the bankruptcy laws.

Now comes some misguided Zealots from Missouri who are agitating a statue to Jessie James, to be placed in some prominent spot. Well and good. We suggest that as a lasting tribute to the outlaw that a tablet be sunken in the base of the statue bearing a picture of a widow and children, a wrecked train, a broken bank, a group of murdered men, the whole backed up with crossed revolvers symbolical of the tolls used by James in his nefarious calling. By all means advertise Jesse James, but be sure and tell what he really was.

As veal chops have much less fat in proportion to lean meat than other chops, they are likely to dry out considerably in cooking unless protected by a coating of egg and bread crumbs. This is the reason for serving veal chops and cutlet "breaded."

THIS is the record made by the Hampshire which secured the award of Grand Champion Ram at the 1926 Pacific Livestock Exposition.

The other two Grand Championships were won at the American Royal, and Chicago International Shows. This achievement is typical of the attainments of the animals exhibited at the Pacific International. Similar successes have been repeated many times in the history of Pacific International, indicating the importance breeders of high types of animals attach to the West's own great Livestock epic. The 17th Annual Exposition will be held at Portland October 29 to November 5, inclusive. The 1926 Grand Champion Ram will probably be exhibited again this year.

The Maupin State Bank known of no better opportunity for the farmers of this district to gain valuable farm information than our own Pacific International. Therefore we say to all, GO, by all means.
