LAST ISSUE OF VOLUME XIII

With this issue of The Maupin Times this paper completes volume 13 and next week will begin with number 1 of volume 14.

The past year has been one to which we can look back with some degree of pleasure. We have done a fairly good business, have kept out of debt and have made a living for the family. All of which is satisfactory to us. While we have had to go to The Dalles for considerable measure of support, still some of the Maupin business men have been loyal and have given us all the patronage they were able. There are business men in this city who seem to think a newspaper is an institution to be supported as any other charity, and the little advertising they give us is in that light. They are crude in their ways and lacking in foresight. They do not seem to be able to grasp the idea that the newspaper is the one thing that keeps Maupin on the map; that but for that, this city would be known only as a place to go to catch a few trout; that our resources and attributes would be buried in the sands of forgetfulness and that there would be nothing to call attention to what we really are if the paper should suspend publication or move away.

We are here to do all we can to further the interests of Maupin. We have our whole interest here and would like to remain in this beautiful little city on the Deschutes. If our business men desire The Times to be a fixture in the place it is up to them to give it the proper support.

To those who have given us their business during the past year we return thanks. We have tried hard to give Maupin a real newspaper and that our efforts have been appreciated by some is gratifying to The Times publishers. We trust our business may be better the coming year, also that our non-advertisers may see the error of their ways, come out of their shells and give us the patronage our efforts deserve.

One of the cheapest ways to clean a room having soiled paper, is to use a coat of alabastine paint over the paper.

"Murder will out" is an old saying. It seems to have been proven true in the case of the man, Pender, under arrest in Portland for several assaults upon and murder of unprotected females. He was apprehended through the willingness of a 15-year-old girl to accompany him to a distant part of the city, they being watched by officers and the man arrested in the attempt to commit an assault upon the girl. Pender has been identified by one woman as the man who attempted an assault upon her in 1925, he being picked out from a line of several other men at police headquarters.

For kitchens or bath rooms where walls may be soiled with water use a dull oil paint to finish beaver boards or plaster. Although oil paints cost more than water tints, they last longer and do not spot.
