Had To Replaster.
Joe Kramer fell into a piece of hard luck with his new bungalow when all the plaster fell from the ceiling and walls of the living room. Joe had plastered the room and built a fire in the building to dry out. The living room coating failed to stick and had to be replaced with another coat. Joe will move to the new home this week.

Building Addition.

Low Henneghan has been busy several days in building another addition to his farm house. This time it was a wash room and now that residence has additions enough to satisfy any occupant of same. L. C. says the next building he erects on his ranch will be a new house and that it will contain enough rooms necessary for an average family.

High Wind Lifts Roof.

Franz Confer went to his ranch Monday last and while there rebuilt part of the roof over his hay pile. The high wind of that day lifted a portion of the roof, carrying it a distance of 100 feet. Franz has about 40 tons of alfalfa baled and about 30 tons loose hay in stack. He will sell either the baled or loose hay, or, in case a buyer wants it, all the hay he has on hand. The hay is clean alfalfa and contains no weeds or foul stuff of any description.

Shipped Carload Cattle.

R. W. McCorkle went to Portland Saturday night, being in charge of a carload of fat cattle, which he was taking to the stockyards. The price of beef cattle is higher than for some time past and R. W. took his down so as to be in time to catch the rising market.

Talcott Visits Prineville.

W. H. Talcott is at home again after a visit of 10 days at Prineville. W. H. went there to see a sister-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Harral, whom he had not seen in 40 years. He is much impressed with the Prineville section, but says that Juniper Flat and Maupin has more charms for him than does the lower country.

The Farmers' Non Partisan Defender in Washington

You need this valuable newspaper in your home, because: You will receive FRESH NEWS every week, that is edited for farmers by men who know agriculture.

THE NATIONAL FARM NEWS gives the farmer and the rural town man an all-agricultural survey of the week's news, with a leaning toward the economics of production and marketing. The editorial staff is in close touch with the marketing machinery of the Agricultural Department and all the heads of the various cooperative marketing associations that are located in Washington.

WASHINGTON is the great clearing house of farm news. Every day brings the National Government into more intimate relationship with the country's basic industry—farming. Congress is just at the beginning of its real farm legislation. The wild scramble of blocs and panaceas that marked the past few years has subsided. But from now on there will be a steady, constructive program developed for the permanent improvement of farming.

Washington is the headquarters of the United States Department of Agriculture. This vast governmental agency is constantly at work on farm problems. It concerns itself not only with production, but with the business side of agriculture.

Washington, too, is the headquarters of many other branches of the Federal Government whose work touches in many vital ways the business of the farmers.

Most of the big farmers' organizations recognize the strategic advantage of being close to the governmental wheels. They maintain headquarters at the National Capital.

Washington is the center of farm news. In addition to its news, The National Farm News carries some carefully conducted departments. For the housewife there is the women's page, where interests and matters pertaining to the household are discussed.

In addition to these features is an excellent legal department. Advice on knotty problems may be had for the asking, given by competent lawyers engaged in daily practice.

Then, too, there is a "Question and Answer" department for agricultural information. You may send in any question and it will be answered as quickly as space will permit. The Congressional Library is here and it has the largest collection of books in America.

The National Farm News is equipped to perform a real service for the farmer and to meet a real need in his business.

The subscription price is only $1.00 per year.
