IS IT HONESTY?

There seems to be a studied endeavor on the part of some people to evade paying their just debts. They will go into a store and on the face of plausibility will engage credit, forgetting when pay day comes around to settle their little obligations. They continue getting goods, making small payments in order to allay the fears of the merchant, at the same time knowing they never intend to pay in full.

Such was the case of some workers in Maupin lately. Those men drew good wages; they seemed to have the good of their families at heart and supplied their tables with the best the market afforded—all on credit. A week or so ago, when a demand was made that they square up, three men loaded their slight belongings on cars and hied themselves to pastures new. The merchants who trusted them were left holding the sack, as the saying goes.

The defaulters have sown seeds of distrust in the minds of the men who trusted them and at the same time have marked themselves up as dead beats, whose records will follow wherever they may locate.

When The Times publishers came to Maupin three years ago they purchased, along with the office equipment and property, the subscription list. The trade was made in good faith. We took the list of the former publisher as authentic and proceeded to send The Times to all whose names appeared thereon. We have kept that practice up until the present time. Lately we asked some of our delinquents to kindly settle up their subscriptions, and have been met with the statement "I ordered the paper stopped four years ago." That may be true. Still they have been taking the paper from their mail boxes up to now, have read it and enjoyed its news. They knew they were expected to pay for the service, but with a gall that is beyond all comprehension now declare they ordered the paper stopped.

Those people deliberately obtained goods under false pretenses. They knew new men were printing the paper; that a postal card would have informed the publishers of their desire to discontinue the paper, or that a personal call at the office would have had the same effect. They did neither, but continued to take and read the paper each week, thereby beating the publishers out of the price of the paper, postage, mailing and incidental expenses incurred in getting the paper to them.

If, as is said, 'Honesty is the best policy,' those dead beats are to be classified among those who seek to evade payment of a just debt, failing to show the least attribute of that honesty that is inherent with most people. We, with the merchants above cited, are left holding the sack, and holding an opinion that some people will bear closer watching than most of their neighbors.

Individual and Co-Operative

John Hanks, a successful farmer in the Ellenburg, Washington, district, told the Kiwanis club of his home town recently that "he has no panacea for the ills of rural life, nor does he ask for any. Panacea are poor stuff to depend on, anyway." He finds the remedy right at the seat of the disease, on the farm itself. Success, he says, is an individual proposition, achieved by mixing, in the right proportions, perseverance and common sense. However, in this day of combination the common sense Mr. Hanks mentions should lead the farmer to join a co-operative organization that will aid and protect him in marketing of his products.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF REAL PROPERTY
 In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Wasco County

M. Alice Webb, Plaintiff vs.
 Minnie E. Bargarholt, Chester Bargarholt and Cora Bargarholt-Jones, Defendants

By virtue of an execution, decree and order of sale, duly issued out of and under the seal of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, for the county of Wasco, to me directed and dated the 16th day of March, 1929, upon a decree for the foreclosure of a certain mortgage, and judgment rendered and entered in said court on the 25th day of January, 1929, in the above entitled cause, in favor of the plaintiff and against the defenaffect the animal's appetite. A horse needs from 10 to 12 gallons of pure water daily.

To help get sprouting of acorns and survival of young oak seedlings, good leaf litter should be maintained on the floor of the woods by preventing all fires. The leaf litter stabilizes the moisture and temperature conditions, and prevents the surface soil from becoming so compact that the roots of the seedlings can not penetrate it.

Most lawns need a spread of some good fertilizer. One that gives excellent results, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is a mixture of 1 part of ammonium sulphate and 3 parts of cottonseed meal, applied at the rate of from 12 to 15 pounds per 1,000 square feet. The mixture should be applied three times during the growing season. Cottonseed meal alone also is satisfactory, but is not as quick acting as when in combination with the ammonium sulphate.

To avoid losses of chicks from gapes, keeps them away from turkeys, the turkeys may show no signs of the disease, but they can pass it on to chicks with fatal results to the latter. Gapes is caused by a parasitic worm that gets into the chick's windpipe, and the male and female worms have the curious habit of attaching themselves so firmly to each other that at first sight they look like a single worm with two heads and two necks. It is pretty difficult to extract the worms and it is better to put your faith in prevention. Put the chicks, as soon as hatched, on clean ground, and keep them away from turkeys or ground occupied by turkeys. Adult chickens seem to be immune from gapes.

"INSIDE INFORMATION"

Children learn to dress themselves if fastenings are easy to find and manage. Use front openings with but a few large and flat buttons.

Egg-yolks are among the best iron-rich foods. They also contain phosphorus and calcium, elements needed to build bone, teeth and other tissues. Vitamins are present, and some fat. Foods containing egg yolks are therefore always valuable.

At this season the markets are full of the so-called "protective foods." They are the fresh fruits and vegetables, eggs, dairy products all good sources of minerals and vitamins, insuring growth and health and preventing the diseases that come from too limited a diet.

Much of the dirt the housekeeper has to contend with is tracked in. A cement path to each door of the house, mats and scrapers outside the doors, and special places just inside the doors for muddy rubbers and boots, will make a big difference in the amount of cleaning to be done.
