The last cutting of alfalfa in sections of the country where winter killing occurs should be made early enough to allow a growth of 6 to 8 inches for protection in the winter.

In 1840 the average weight of fleece sheared from American sheep was less than 2 pounds. By 1900 it had increased to nearly 5 pounds. Today it is approaching 8 pounds.

There is still room for improvement. Much of this difference has come from progressive weeding out of low producers and by breeding from the heavily fleeced sheep.

Silage made from corn containing moisture enough for proper preservation is more palatable to stock than that made from corn so mature that it needs the addition of water. Usually corn should be harvested for the silo about a week or ten days before it would be cut for silage.

Wounds in potatoes are the most frequent source of storage rot, and careful handling during the harvest and storage will increase loss from this source. Cooling freshly harvested potatoes too rapidly may cause rot, because of the slowing down of wound repair. If wounds are properly healed before potatoes are placed in storage, and if sufficient ventilation is provided to keep them dry during storage, very low temperature is unnecessary to prevent loss by storage rot.

Well-fattened beef animals that are weighing from 700 to 1200 pounds are in increasing demand at livestock markets. Calves selected for fattening should be of the type that is wide, deep bodied, smooth flunk fleshed, and well grown, with short leg, and of good quality as shown by fineness of hair, medium bone, smoothness of flesh, refinement about the head, and a lack of paunchiness. Uniformity in size, weight, and color are also advantages in marketing.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

If pockets cannot be placed on a child's dress because they spoil the design or if they cannot be used because of pleats or other features, make a pocket on the bloomers or drawers. Every child needs a pocket in every dress or suit.

Left-over egg yolks have many uses. They are a valuable source of iron and should always be used. They may be hard-cooked in the double boiler, mashed and seasoned for sandwich filling. Raw or hard-cooked egg yolks make a good foundation for salad dressing. Several good egg sauces for fish or meat can be made with the yolks only, and soft custard for dessert is still another use.

One of the most common causes of failure in making sauerkraut is the use of too much salt. The right quantity is 2 per cent by weight of the cabbage packed. When cabbage is to be fermented in a very warm weather it may be well to use a little more salt but not to exceed 3 per cent. The salt should be evenly distributed. The red streaks sometimes seen in sauerkraut are believed to be due to uneven distribution of the salt.

Probably fewer sandwiches would be discarded from children's lunch boxes if the bread were always of the best quality. Children will eat more bread if different kinds are served. Sometimes so simply a change as baking the bread in a new form—a twist or rolls instead of a loaf, or cutting the sandwiches into fancy shape with a cookie cutter, will increase interest in it. The change of flavor given by added raisins, dried currants, dates, or nut meats is another inducement to like the lunch bread.

HOME POINTERS

The best dressmakers do not always use French seams for all garments, because a French seam, even though neatly made, often gives an amateurish appearance to the finished garment, because it "draws" slightly. A plain seam, with the raw edge turned under once, and held with a running stitch is better for fine silks. If the fabric does not reveal easily, the edges may be pinked with a pinking machine.

Time can be saved, when making children's clothes, by cutting out several garments at the same time, even though they will be finished in different ways, as all seams can be stitched, and all pockets, cuffs, collars etc., made at one time.

CLEAR LAKE CAMP NOTES

for the "air pockets." When the plane went into one of these holes in the air and settled down for a fifty foot drop, Jim's stomach would come up.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Ernest Kirsch received the highest mark in oral spelling Monday, which shows work on his part.

Friday the Fifth and Sixth grades tried painting a landscape with water colors. From a distance the effect is best.

Our allotment of library books has arrived. Several books have already been read.

We still receive new plants, Mrs. Joynt and Alice Greene having contributed. Mr. Weberg thinks they may be frozen soon, but we hope not.

Third and Fourth Grades

Loyal Pratt brought some mineral water and red soil from Warm Springs. The pupils enjoyed examining them.

The Third and Fourth grade room had a perfect attendance and hope to keep it up.

Albert Troutman, Third grade, has made great improvement in writing.

GENERAL NOTES

The Second graders won the cleanliness race.

The new inspectors for our room are Gar Mayhew, Jack Bothwell.

The newly elected police are Edna Contrell, Muri Addington.

Last week health inspection took place. The majority of the family was excellent.

Mrs. McCleod and Mrs. Crabtree were visitors Friday.

Twenty-five new interesting books from the Wasco County library are being enjoyed by the Primary people.

The honor reading table has been made more attractive by a new colorful cover, also the addition of illustrated story books.

A cemetery is the addition to our room where upon the tomb stones you find these engravings: "Here Lies I Use No Tooth Brush," "Bad Teeth" "Dirty Finger Nails." The graves are very realistic.

Mrs. Weberg visited us Monday. She arrived at the proper time to enjoy the victory of the Second graders in their race.

Beulah Richmond was absent Friday on account of illness.

Mary Story, a new comer to Maupin, has joined our Second grade class.

Don Stogsdill lost a brownish gray cap with a pink lining on September 25th or 26th. Anyone finding a cap will please return it to the Maupin school.
