THE MAUPIN TIMES

SHALL OREGON BE ADVERTISED

Oregon as a state annually spends $4,500,000. Likened to a corporation the state of Oregon is the biggest business in the commonwealth.

The state directs the schools and universities. It regulates the railroads, the telephone systems, the water companies, and builds and maintains the highways.

To direct this vast corporation a man of proved executive ability, a man of sufficient vision, a man of character and a man willing to serve the people, is needed. That man is Senator Charles Hall of Coos county.

Senator Hall is no experiment. His work in the state senate has stamped his worth upon the minds of the people of Oregon. His progressive attitude in matters pertaining to the welfare of this great state is well known and commended by all. He is not to be influenced by combinations of capitalists, his mind being open to the many needs of the state and that mind will direct him along right lines as governor. Coming up from the soil, as it were, he has been the architect of his own life, and that life has been filled with acts and purpose to do the greatest good for his state.

He does not seek the highest office the people of Oregon can bestow upon any citizen merely to pose as governor. His interests are bound up in the advancement of our state and if elected our people may point with pride to the fact that Oregon has a governor whose sole aim is for the advancement and welfare of the state.

With the galaxy of candidates for the office in the field it is in order for us to mention that of the six candidates on the Republican ticket for governor five of them live on the Columbia river or in a place contiguous thereto, while but one registers from outside that section, and that candidate is Charles Hall.

If Oregon's people desire a man as governor whose highest ambition is the furtherance of the interests of the state, then they will see to it that Charles Hall is that man. When Friday, May 16, arrives and the polls of the primary election booths are opened for voting, no one can go wrong if they cast their ballots for Coos county's favorite son. If that is done there need be no doubt of his election as governor, and in that event this wonderful state will be advertised to the world for just what it is—the grandest state in the Union, where men are men and where just consideration is given all, no matter whether clothed in tailor-made suits or wear overalls.
