

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

They litter the whole system.

Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

NAGGING PAINS

Newport News, Va., July 22, 1903.

Last summer while recovering from illness of fever, I had a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism in the knees, from which I was unable to leave my room for several months. I was treated by two doctors and also tried different kinds of liniments and medicines which seemed to relieve me from pain for awhile, but at the same time I was not any nearer getting well. One day while reading a paper I saw an advertisement of S. S. S. for Rheumatism. I decided to give it a trial, which I did at once. After I had taken three bottles I felt a great deal better, and I still continued to take it regularly until I was entirely cured. I now feel better than for years, and I cheerfully recommend S. S. S. to any one suffering from Rheumatism. 613 3rd St. CHAS. E. GILDERSLEEVE.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid or some other acid poison in the blood, which when deposited in the muscles and joints, produce the sharp, cutting pains and the stiffness and soreness peculiar to this disease. S. S. S. goes directly into the circulation, all irritating substances are neutralized and filtered out of the system, the blood is made pure and the general health is built up under the purifying and tonic effects of the vegetable remedy. Write for our special book on Rheumatism which is sent free. Our physicians will advise without charge all who will write us about their case.

A DISAPPEARING VILLAGE.

The sketch presents a shore view of the little village of Hallsands, England, which is gradually being carried away by the sea. It is on the stormy Devonshire coast, far from a railroad, and its only industry is crab fishing. The hamlet is built close to the sea, and a cliff rises at its back. Some years ago walls and quays were built to protect the houses, but they did not withstand the fury of the easterly gales. Once nature provided a safeguard in the form of fifty yards of pebble beach which a fierce storm rolled up from the sea, but the government dredgers needed the shingle, and the village was left to its fate.

Tibbles Lived to Become a Candidate for Vice President.

One of the unique figures in the Presidential campaign is Thomas T. Tibbles, the Populist nominee for Vice President. He is an editor, but at various times has been a lawyer, a farmer, a preacher and a lecturer. He is now 66 years old. He has the face of a Roman. Great, gaunt features, fiery gray eyes, an aggressive nose and eyebrows, with a mass of snow-white hair falling in curls over his forehead and ears, he presents a striking appearance. Editorially he neither asks nor gives quarter. He is firmly convinced that the nation is menaced by the machinations of Wall street and he frequently gives voice to his belief.

He began as a lawyer at Council Bluffs fifty years ago, abandoning Blackstone to become one of John Brown's raiders. He demonstrated his courage once when Quantrell's band of guerrillas captured him and strung him up three times to compel him to divulge the secrets of his leaders. He refused and was left to hang as the borderers rode away. He was saved none too soon by the arrival of his comrades.

After that he became an itinerant Methodist preacher, but chafed under the restrictions of creed and joined the Presbyterians. With them he found he could not preach what he pleased, and he took to newspaper work. A few years later he took a homestead in Cuming County, which he still owns. His first wife, a cultivated Englishwoman, died in 1882.

Later Tibbles married the daughter of Joseph LaFlesche, head chief of the Omaha Indians, a girl of remarkable beauty and unusual education. "Bright Eyes," the English translation of her Indian name of Isth'-the-am'-ba, was for years a contributor to magazines and newspapers. She died a year ago. Tibbles met her while defending as a volunteer lawyer the Ponca Indians in a habeas corpus suit growing out of their disinclination to be removed to the Indian Territory. She gave him much testimony in the case, and after it was over he married her. At the suggestion of an Episcopalian bishop, Tibbles and his wife then took to the lecture platform, and spent five years in telling Americans and Englishmen the story of the Indians and their wrongs.

ATHLETIC GAMES IN SYRIA.

Customs of the Orientals Undergoing Gradual Transformation.

Oriental peoples are very averse to physical exercise of any kind, says the World To-Day. Their idea of enjoyment is to sit, under an awning and play backgammon. That a man should go out and run around a track in shameless nakedness and this with a hope of gain, only confirms them in the belief that all Americans are mad. But they are imitative people, and years ago the influence and example of the younger teachers got a few of the preparatory boys out for footraces. That day, for Beirut at least, the death blow was struck to the picturesque dress of the Orient. You can't run a 100-yard dash with long, baggy drawers and a silk gumbex that flops around your ankles. Even if you "gird up the loins," by tucking your skirts into the sash, the effect is more startling than speedy. So, one by one, the students ordered trousers from the city tailors. At first they were poorly cut and viewed with suspicion; but to-day there are not three men in the collegiate department who wear the old costume, and many of the students dress with taste and an elegance that their professors cannot afford to emulate.

Tennis and basketball soon won their place in the students' favor; and now we have gymnastic apparatus and a regular graduated athletic director, who has learned physical culture and boy nature through a long experience in the gymnasiums of America. But it was football that did the most toward unification. The value of teamwork is a new idea to eastern college men. The old ideal was that of "every man for himself." It has been so since the time of Alcibiades and Absalom. If it had not been so the history of the world might have been different. It was comparatively easy to see the joy of winning a footrace or a tennis match; but to play an untheatrical part in a football game, obeying a captain and working for the good of the side, that was a very different thing. We always play the "association" game, and it used to be the ideal of every player to get the ball and carry it down the field all by himself, while the audience cheered "Bravo, Jurjy!" So we arranged matches with the crews of visiting British frigates, and from sad experience our boys learned the value of back plays and frequent passes, and began to see dimly the truth that good football is played, not with the legs or the mouth, but with the head, and that hard teamwork is far better than grandstand plays. That lesson may change the map of Asia some day.

Exchange of Compliments.

The village sexton, in addition to being grave-digger, acted as a stonemason, house repairer and furniture remover.

The local doctor, having obtained a more lucrative appointment in another county, employed the sexton to assist in his removal.

When it came time to settling up accounts the doctor deducted an old contra account due by the sexton. He wrote at the same time, objecting to the charge made for removing his furniture.

"If this was steady, it would pay much better than grave-digging."

The sexton replied: "Indade, Ol wud be glad ave a steady job; grave-diggin' is very slack since you left."
