The Wild Duck.

"You were out gunning yesterday, I hear. See any wild ducks?"

"One," replied the amateur hunter.

"But you didn't get within range, I suppose."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Paying for Information.

"Say, me good man," exclaimed the city youth, who was undecided whether to buy shrimp or minnows, "what do you catch fish with around here?"

"Give me a quarter and I'll tell you," grunted the ruralite with the new-cut pole.

"Here it is. Now, what do you catch them with?"

"Hooks!"—Philadelphia Record.

Told by Truthful James.

A more or less truthful Australian relates that he put an unusually large porcelain egg in the nest of a hen and found that the next eggs she laid were of increased size. Then he put a goose egg in the nest. The hen laid an egg just as large. He was so pleased with the scheme that he put a whitewashed football in the nest. When he went the next time to search for eggs he found one as big as a football, but no hen in sight. Securing the egg, he saw engraved on it, by hen photography, these words: "I'm no ostrich, but I've done my best." Later he found the hen inside the egg.

Social Equality in Cambridge.

Before Longfellow bought the house in Cambridge so associated with his memory it was owned and occupied by old Mrs. Craigie.

Mrs. Craigie was a woman of many eccentricities. Monseigneur D. Conway says in his recent book of "Reminiscences."

Some one once tried to persuade her to have her trees tarred to protect them from caterpillars, which also invaded her neighbor's trees.

She refused to be so cruel to the caterpillars.

"They are our fellow worms," she said.

WONDERFUL MAGIC GOBLETS.

Did you ever hear of thunder in a goblet? Of course, it would have to be miniature thunder, or it would shatter the goblet, and indeed, it is so small an edition of it that the noise is like the popping of a cork from a bottle. But the principle of the thunder is, nevertheless, there—that is, the rushing of air to fill a vacuum.

Here is a pretty experiment showing this: Take two goblets and place them, mouth to mouth; then put around them, where the brims meet, a rubber band about an inch in width, to prevent the passage of air.

Try now to pull them apart and you will find that they stick together very closely, so closely, indeed, that you may swing them, as a pendulum without their separating. But pull with still more force and they will come apart with the noise that I have mentioned.

Let us make another experiment with them. Immerse them in water contained in a vessel large enough to hold them both readily, and while still under water place them mouth to mouth. Put the rubber band around them while they are in this condition, and having taken them out of the water you will find that you can swing them as before, and that to pull them apart requires more force than when they are empty. The reason is that the water does not expand like air, so that, the moment you begin to pull the goblets apart, the vacuum is formed; and the pressure of the outside air makes them adhere more closely because the vacuum is greater. You may think that it is the rubber band that is holding the goblets together, but still another experiment will show you that the only purpose served by the band is to make a tight joint so that air cannot pass through it. Cut a ring from a sheet of rubber and put the goblets under water as before. Into one of them put a piece of ice and over its brim place the rubber ring, bringing the other goblet against the ring, too, so that they are mouth to mouth, with only the flat rubber ring between them.

Now, when the ice begins to melt, the contents of that goblet contract, forming a vacuum, and the pressure of the outside air holds the goblets so closely together that you may handle them out of the water without their separating.

To have perfect success with these experiments it is only necessary to use care in preparing for them.—New York Mail.

Her Practical Mind.

He always said that she had a mind too severely practical for an author's wife. He could be optimistic on very slight provocation, but she wanted something tangible to inspire optimism.

"You seem to be happy," she remarked, as he came in one evening.

"I am," he replied, "and with good reason. I've brought home some good news."

"Delightful!" she returned, with gentle sarcasm. "Now all that remains is to decide how you will have it cooked."

"Have what cooked?"

"The good news. I infer from what you say that you have brought home nothing else, so we must live on that." Brooklyn Eagle.

When some people haven't any great trouble, they smile as much as to say, How brave I am!

A scientist is a man of learning; among other things he is apt to learn that he isn't flim-flam proof.
