Machinery for Plant at Cazadero

The Portland Evening Telegram: Orders have been placed in New York by the Oregon Water Power & Railway Company for machinery costing $150,000 to be installed in the new electric power plant under construction at Cazadero. Transformers, generators and the motor wheels comprise most of the order. They were sold for delivery at Portland by the first of next January. It is promised that not later than April 1, 1906, electric energy will be supplied by power taken from the Clackamas river that will insure a daily capacity of 20,000 horsepower.

Not all of this will be utilized by the company. A contract has been entered into between the company and the Portland General Electric Company through which the latter company is to receive the benefit of all juice not required by the owners of the plant, and this in turn, will be switched to the feed lines of the General Electric at the Waverly Golf Links station, and from there distributed to the city and elsewhere. Substations will be built to properly handle this immense amount of electricity. Two are already finished, one at Eagle Creek and the other at Gresham, and another is in course of construction at the links. The fourth will be built at Oak Grove on the Oregon City line. All these are stone stations.

G. I. Brown chief engineer for the O. W. P. has a force of over 150 men working at Cazadero building the big dam which will retain water in a reservoir covering 90 acres. It is estimated that the entire enterprise will cost approximately $1,250,000 and require four years time to build.

John P. St John, of Kansas, noted for his peculiar traits of thought, said while in Portland the other day, that Roosevelt and Bryan will join the Prohibitionists.

The Lewis and Clark Exposition is a lively affair during the live stock show. The Coast people are flocking to the Fair and the last month will be the biggest attendance of any.
