CASTLE BUILDERS

Castle-builders everyone are we; Building daily for eternity. Actions are the blocks with which we build. The fruition of our hopes fulfilled; Character, the foundation firm and true; Girders are the will to dare and do; All the structure mortised in with thought Makes us wonder at the thing we've wrought.

But the castle build we with our lives; Just the one for each of us survives. What shall be the structure which we raise? Shall it merit God's and whole world's praise? Shall we build it adamant stone To remain till time itself hath flown? Or the structure be decaying wood Soon to pass on time's e'er-sweeping flood?

After looking over this report is there any use to ask why the State of Oregon carries a deposit in the Estacada State Bank?
