Where the opals meet the blues In a line of blending hues Circles low a sea guil gray, Rising, dipping, far away.

Little swelling ripples run, Riccing onward to the sun, Gliating where the boats are tossed On the billows, spray embossed.

On the drifting sands I lie; Every now and then I sigh, Wishing Polly 'd turn her head. Wondering why her ear is red Polly sits and pouts at me, Just an sweet as she can be, But she will not make reply When I question her and sigh.

So I gently Sake her hand, Trusting she will understand, Gazing on her burning cheek, Waiting for the girl to speak. Where the opals meet the blues In a line of blending hues Polly gazes far away. And she doesn't answer nay.
