San Francisco, June 9.-A quarrel of unparalleled bitterness, involving Judge William P. Lawlor and virtually all of the attorneys engaged in the trial of Patrick Calhoun, enlivened a day otherwise devoted to presentation of routine testimony. Assistant District Attorney Heney started the dis-pute by charging that Earl Rogers, an attorney for the defense, had been miling at certain members of the jury. There was an angry response from ohn T. Barrett, of the defense, who leclared that the prosecution had unnecessarily prolonged the trial by the introduction of trivial matters. The subject of the jurors' smiles was about to be dismissed, when John J.
