How to Read.

Reading is not a lost art to the ony. same degree that conversation is, but It has in most cases an arrested development through so much reading that male voice growled. 'This is a bedmakes no demand upon aesthetic sensibility, so that one is apt to bring to a fine story full of delicate shades of thought and feeling the same mind which he yields to a newspaper, putting a blunt interrogation as to its N. Y. meaning as conveyed in the terms of a rational proposition, and the writer's charm is wholly lost upon him. While the reader's surrender to the author must be complete, his attitude should not be passive, but that of active responsiveness and partnership.-H. M. ▲lden in Harper's Magazine.

From first to last the report is fre from comment on bureaus not under th urisdiction of the secretary of the in with the forest service, but at place reading between the lines, can be indications of the secretary a desire that congress shall absolutely define the powers of the secretary of the inerior, so that in future there will b no excuse whatever for officials of an other department undertaking to die tate questions of policy and adminis-tration to his branch of the government

Because of the prominence given to the question of water powers throug newspapers and magazines of late, Se retary Ballinger's views on that sub ject perhaps outshadow all other feat-ures of his report. In discussing power sites the secretary presents a complete suggestion for the guidance of con-gress, and not with the idea that his recommendations will be followed ex-plicitly. Rather, the plan is presented as a basis for discussion, and incidentally it may be said it is the first definite plan of power-site legislation yet presented by any government official.
