The legislature of this state adjourned early Saturday morning. The closing hours of the Senate were marked by a wordy argument between a couple of its prominent members in which the lie was passed. The people would have had as much respect for these same members if they had refrained from their attempted effort to get even and say foolish things, such as might be expected at a rough and tumble fight or some other disorderly gathering. The dignity of a law-making body which is supposed to be studying the various interests of their constituents and to make laws—the least number the better—that they may dwell in unity by having good laws well enforced, should make these same senators orderly. It seems to us however that too much of their brain racking study was how best they could do things to get even or back at the other fellow.

We expect to see good results come from the start made by the Legislature in enacting laws for permanent road building. Four of the five acts proposed by the Good Roads Association, with changes, finally passed. In amending the originals and substituting to embody the ideas of the different factions in carrying on permanent road building some of the salient features were lost, but a start was made. The State Aid bill as passed is of little use as it appropriates money and does not designate who shall receive it or how it is to be drawn from the treasury. It is thought Governor West will veto this bill for this reason. The State Highway Commission law as passed makes it an advisory board. As such, it is believed, with the people anxious for good roads back of it, it will do much good.

The transformation of a wilderness into a garden is planned for Western Washington and Oregon no less wonderful than the miracle wrought by irrigation east of the Cascades. This is the solution of the logged-off land problem that now seems in sight. To the South-western Washington Development Association must be given the credit of carrying this movement forward until it has reached a point where successful clearing of large areas of stump lands at low cost is successfully accomplished.

At the convention of the association, held the past week in Vancouver, the method of operation was shown and plans for the future discussed. Prof Sparks of the State College at Pullman showed by actual demonstration how land may be cleared of stumps and roots with a minimum of money and effort and at the convention sessions prominent delegates outlined a scheme for pooling stump land areas and making fertile farms out of now almost worthless land.

The organization of a big company to handle the land, clearing it and placing it on the market in small tracts for the farmer, was forecasted. It was suggested that money be raised for the work by bonding the land, similar to the plan followed in irrigation districts. Easy payments for purchasers were favored and it was generally agreed that the resulting development in dairying, vegetable growing and fruit raising would be astonishing in its far reaching benefits to the territory lying between the Cascade Mountains and the sea.

Twenty-two towns will be placed on the railroad map of Oregon by the operation of the Oregon Trunk up the Deschutes Canyon and on to Madras, which will be started March 1. These centers have never before had railroad transportation and the surrounding country will

Denatured Alcohol in Solid Form
(Cleveland Special Dispatch)

A well known Wheeling, W. Va., chemist has succeeded in producing chunks of denatured alcohol in crystal form by means of a small infusion of certain acids whereby crystals of an alkaloidal nature very closely resembling physiologically the effects of ethyl alcohol distilled from saw dust. The method employed and the results obtained are somewhat similar to the crystallizing of rock candy or that of Saccharine containing as it does 350 times the sweetening strength over that of cane sugar so this alkaloidal crystallized alcohol contains many times the strength over the ordinary denatured fluid alcohol they will yield 194 proof denatured alcohol with a greater heating and cooking power for stoves than gasoline and it is absolutely non-explosive.

Industrial Alcohol Still 5 Gal. Tax-Free pays for itself every month. 5 to 500 Gal. Stills installed under guarantee. Alcohol Solidified 33 samples Solid Alkaloid Cubes 194 proof, post-paid for $2.00.

The utilization of Wood Waste by Distillation. A general consideration of the New Industry, including a full description of the distilling apparatus used and the principle involved, also methods of chemical control and disposal of the products, first edition illustrated by seventy-four engravings, 156 pages. This book is cloth bound, it will be sent to any address post paid on receipt of $3.20.

increase in productivity and wealth to a remarkable extent because of the markets placed within reach of the farmer by the coming of the railroad. Pioneer conditions will obtain no longer in Central Oregon. There is now no obstacle to its agricultural development.

Products of the Beaver State will have their lining during the two weeks beginning February 27, when the "Made in Oregon" exposition will open in Portland. Home manufacturers will show what they are doing to meet the demands of their own people for factory products, and the wide variety of articles to be shown will, unquestionably, prove a surprise to many. A local department store will house the exhibits. A similar exposition was held there some years ago and was a great success. The promoters of the coming show expect to outdo the former one.

A colony of Danish farmers is to be brought to Oregon during the coming Spring and established on lands in Multnomah and Yamhill counties. The immigrants will number about 100 and are all experienced in intensive farming. Small tracts will be used and vegetables, small fruits and poultry will be raised. Practically every foot of ground will be utilized by these thrifty farmers from abroad, and it is said that they can teach the American agriculturist a few things in conserving all the resources of the soil.

George Washington As History Sees Him

Famous Cherry Tree Incident Is Said To Be A Myth.—Review Of Parts Of Washington's Life

George Washington, born Feb. 22, 1732, was the eldest son of Augustine Washington by a second marriage. His mother's maiden name was Mary Ball. Augustine's first wife was a Miss Jane Butler. The first wife bore him four children and the second seven, of whom George was the eldest. The father died when George was about twelve years of age. Certain genealogists have claimed to have traced the family history far back, but in this they are not sustained by the facts according to the best information obtainable. They are mythical, as also the cherry tree incident is said to be.

Washington, like Lincoln, grew in greatness from the great responsibility thrust upon him, and which he keenly felt he was not prepared to meet. The family history is traceable to his great grandfather John Washington who settled in Virginia about 1657.

We are sorry to attempt to take away from the boys and girls of America the cherry tree incident with its useful lesson of truthfulness, but history will not sustain it.

Washington's life until he grew in greatness was very similar to other family life in the Virginia settlements. His education was of the ordinary kind and, except for being a good mathematician, was limited. His writing and diaries have been edited and the spelling and rhetoric changed correctly so that those of his time would not recognize much of the writing were it possible for them to read it.

Biographers in relieving the monotony of a plain farmer lad's life that has since become the greatest and most beloved character in our history, injected some of the little incidents, such as the cutting down of the cherry tree, the tracing of his family history back to the Washingtons of England or to Odion.

It was about the year 1748 when he was but 18 years old that his first work was done that brought him into prominence. His half brother was his guardian and while living with him, through the influence of Lord Fairfax who was his half brother's father-in-law, he made arrangements to become a midshipman. This arrangement was opposed by his mother and he was appointed surveyor for the vast Fairfax property. He was in this position for three years. At the expiration of that time the troubles of the French and Indian war began to give the colonists trouble. Washington was appointed an adjutant of the Virginia troops with the rank of major by Lieutenant-Governor Dunwiddie in 1753-4 and was sent to warn the French away from their new forts in Western Pennsylvania. His defense of Fort Necessity brought him into prominence and he was made Commander-in-chief of the Army of Virginia. At the age of 23 he served in Braddock's campaign and for 2 years defended 350 miles of territory with only 700 men. In 1758 he commanded the advance guard which captured Ft. DuQuense and renamed it Pitt.

The war in Virginia being at an end he went back to his farmer life and married Mrs. Curtis, a widow. In securing her as his wife he added about $180,000 to his estate. They settled down at Mt. Vernon.

His extraordinary escape in Braddock's defeat was made use of in a sermon by a colonial minister when he said, "It is my belief that the young man was spared that he might be the savior of his country." However, no such evidence had then appeared and his life continued to be much the same as his Virginia neighbors.

John Ely,
Administrator of the estate of Mary E. Ely, deceased.

Dated this 23rd day of February, A. D. 1911.

In 1774 the Virginia convention appointed seven of its members as delegates to the Continental Congress and Washington was one of them. This was his first national recognition. Washington was not a speech-maker, consequently while a member of this Congress we do not hear of any lengthy arguments coming from him. He was considered radical in the few remarks he had to make and in his opposition to Governor Dunmore. Also the petitions, even to the king, he was soon marked as a leader, for what he in after years became, the leader of his people.

The two most powerful colonies were Virginia and Massachusetts. After the fights at Lexington and Concord, Congress determined to put the colonies in a state to defend themselves. On motion of John Adams, of Mass. Washington was unanimously elected Commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the United Colonies. Refusing any salary he accepted the office. These were the events that brought him into national prominence and which he himself declared he felt he was illly prepared to perform.

His military operations and election as the first president followed before he again took up his farm life.

Washington died December 14, 1799 at Mount Vernon, beloved and revered by his countrymen. To day after the history which has been made since the foundation of our government, Washington's name stands at the head of all our illustrious men in the hearts of the people.
