Steel Trust Operations Disclosed by John W. Gates.

Carnegie Company Was Bought at $2 for $1-Competition Eliminated By Combine.

Washington, D. C .- John W. Gates told the house "steel trust" investigating committee Saturday the history of the United States Steel corporation. Present at its birth, he described how it was the natural outcome of what he described as the refusal of Andrew Carnegie to be bound by the "gentlemen's agreements" that marked the early days of oper ompetition in the steel business.

He also told of millions lost and created almost in a breath; how the Carnegie mills, appraised at $160,-000,000, were reorganized as worth $320,000,000 almost within the time required to make the transfer to the corporation; of the clash in the formative days when John D. Rockefeller was dissuaded from joining in the creation of the trust.

Relating how Carnegie had been forced to abandon plans for extending his steel business, Mr. Gates frankly admitted the combination was formed to throttle competition, and that, when John D. Rockefeller had sought to enter the steel business, a deal was put through which forced him to sell out for 40 cents on the dollar.

Characterizing Mr. Carnegie as a bull in a china shop," Mr. Gates told of a midnight conference between himself, Charles M. Schwab and J. P. Morgan, at which the Steel Corporation was conceived, and said that it resulted in Carnegie's getting $320,-00,000 in the corporation's securities for his interests, which he had offered for sale for $160,000,000 cash. The taking over of the Tenness
