The Norway Maple. In many parts of the east the Nor I way or sycamore maple is a favorite for street planting, though it is some what intolerant of dust and smoke and is therefore better suited to rural districts and villages than congested city centers. As it is a spreading tree, care should be taken to prevent its bending too low. It thrives in southern California as well as any of the maples, but seems to thrive still in better farther north. Nature seems to dictate an evergreen country, and it is somewhat puzzling to know why we have sycamores, cottonwoods, etc. almost identical with species found in eastern states. In central and northern California, where oaks are deciduous, the maples thrive and nc objection should be made to use or street and highway.	when the Kan.—After two weeks of most diligent searching by scores of men, who have turned over every brush pile and combed every field in this part of the country, no trace of the missing Ralp Jackson has been found. When this young man, alumnus of Chicago university and the Friends university of Wichita and teacher of mathematics in the Sterling (Kan.) high school, stepped off a Santa Fe train in this city he apparently stepped out of the world. The only thing that might possibly indicate that he intended to disappear is that he drew all his money, about $65, from a Sterling bank before he took the train for Wichita.
