El Paso, Tex. - Mexican insurrectos rould not hesitate to fire into American territory from Juarez if any troops recruited by the Mexican federal government on American territory attempted to cross the Rio Grande here. Colonel Pascual Orozco, Sr., father of the rebel chief and head of the Juarez garrison, in this way replied to the demand of Colonel Steever, commander of the department of Texas, that no rifle shots or bombs or must cross into the United States from Juarez at any time.

Colonel Pascual Orozco said that while he would direct his men to avoid as far as possible firing into El Paso in case of fighting, yet if any men recruited, as he alleges, in El Paso by E. C. Lorente, the Mexican consul here, composed the attacking force, he would feel justified in giving his men no instructions. Ever since the United States blockaded the southern ports early in the Civil war European countries have been trying to raise cotton in their Asiatic and African possessions. In half a century they have not succeeded in doing enough to make any particular impression upon the world's cotton markets. The area of the Nile valley is very limited. Cotton of a short staple is raised in India, but only in a moderate amount, and the culture shows little tendency to increase. Russia has long produced in her Asiatic possessions a moderate amount of cotton, and the little dis pute over passports for American Jews Al increased the desire of Russia to reduce its imports from this country, to which end the minister of agriculture has just visited central Asia, but he has returned convinced that little can be done to increase cotton culture.
