Under the Mighty Frown.

Having fallen into disfavor with the county court, because it has revealed the unbusinesslike methods of county bookkeeping and management, The Progress is about to be horribly punished by the withdrawal of $5 worth of county business, which, it appears, it has heretofore enjoyed annually, during the six or seven years of its existence. Road supervisors of this section, or more properly speaking, one supervisor at least, has been notified by the court not to publish in The Progress notice of a meeting of residents of a certain road district, for which the paper receives $5. The supervisor has been ordered to send the notice to an Oregon City newspaper. That means that The Progress is to lose 41 2/3 cents a month, this year.

Well, The Progress will try to bear up and evade bankruptcy and as it has a large number of subscribers in the road district referred to, it will give due notice of the meeting so the residents may be given the service to which they are entitled. It is not likely they will ever see the notice in the Oregon City newspaper, but that doesn't make any difference to the county court. It will simply add $5 to the huge county printing receipts of the county seat newspaper.

In the meantime The Progress will continue to peg along somehow, giving the taxpayers the truth about management or mismanagement of county affairs, together with such reports as the Whitfield experts of Portland file, providing, of course, the court continues this firm in employment. And, doubtless the 41 2/3 cents a month it is losing, will be made up by the continuous increase in subscribers. The taxpayers are coming to understand they are learning some interesting facts about how their taxes are being spent.

Now, U'ren thinks he will run for governor on a single tax platform. He will get about as near as single tax did at the recent election.

Coincident with the carrying of woman suffrage in Oregon, comes reports from every hamlet about women candidates. Let's see, didn't the champions of suffrage, before election, declare the women weren't looking for office?

The mawkish sentiment expressed over Vincent Astor because he has $75,000,000 to look after is useless when it is remembered that Vincent probably never will be worried one minute all his life about the "responsibility" and besides, he can get rid of it in one day, if he desires. But never fear, the estate will pile up as always and he won't care either.

Old Maids Put up a Fine Playlet Before Big Crowd

Before an audience which packed every inch of seating and standing space at the Family Theatre, last Saturday evening, the Old Maids' association produced a playlet which made good. The proceeds went to the fund for the Rebekah piano. The transforming of the "old maids" to young and beautiful women and in some cases to men, not so young and not so beautiful, created much merriment and the local hits kept the audience in an uproar. The members of the cast and those who were the "make-overs" acquitted themselves with credit.

The cast was composed of Mesdames Reed, Morton, James, Curdin, Altman, E. Bates, Adix, O. Smith, E. Saling, A. Lindsey, Henry Heiple, L. E. Belfils, D. Eschleman, Miss Gertrude Morrow and Owen Smith. The "make-overs" who recited, sang and danced were: The Misses Ellen Hicks, Edna Jorg, Hattie Belfils, Florence Kendall, Rachael Reed, Elva Adams, Mrs. Matson Jerome Schultz and Edgar Williams.

Ask County Court to Stop Hunt From Working Road

At a meeting of residents of road district 10, Tuesday morning, a resolution was passed asking the county court to issue orders for the stoppage of work on a new road following along the bluff of the river, until such time as the court meets for consideration of a petition of 45 signers. "Hass" Tracy was appointed to go before the court and present the resolution, requesting Supervisor Hunt to cease work for the time being until the matter is adjusted.

The road proposition was started before districts 10 and 49 were divided and there has been a good deal of dispute over the road ever since.

Three Heroes Daze Fate.

A runaway team, which rounded the corner of Second and Broadway, Monday afternoon, was stopped by Bert Byers who seized the bits and brought the frightened animals to a standstill within 100 feet, after he intercepted them. After the horses had been brought to a stop, Al. Havens rushed madly on the scene and secured a strangle hold on the subdued equines which he retained until the driver was firmly planted in his seat. Bill Jayne also distinguished himself by bravely rushing into the street and blocking it some hundreds of feet beyond the scene of excitement, presumably acting as an emergency stop should the team break away from the first barrier. He retained his position of danger until chased off the street by neighbors.

to make the weekly meetings, Sunday morning, and the monthly meeting for business and social enjoyment, interesting to all young men whether members of the school or not.

ABOUT A MILE.

It Makes a Difference in Which Land One Travels This Distance.

If you take a notion to settle down for a time and after you have been whisked out and back in a motorcar you think to ask how far the house is from the station the agent carelessly waves his hand and airily remarks, "About a mile," you had best take heed as to what country you are in at the time. If it is in England you are all right, for the familiar 1,760 yards is the standard, but if you have taken a fancy to some sod thatched Irish cottage it means a tramp of 2,240 yards, and if you are moved to linger in the highlands remember that the braw Scot calls 1,770 yards a mile. Considering the size of Switzerland, one might expect a mile to be about as far as one could throw a ball, but the hardy mountaineers think 9,133 yards the proper thing, even when, as it generally is, it is very much uphill. The Swiss is the longest mile of all, being followed by the Vienna post mile of 8,206 yards. The Flemish mile is 6,500 yards, the Prussian 8,237 yards, and in Denmark a stroll of a mile. The Arabs generally ride good horses and call 2,143 yards a mile, while the Turks are satisfied with 1,826 yards, and the Italians shorten the distance of a mile to 1,760 yards, just six yards more than the American has in mind when the agent waves his hand and blandly remarks, "About a mile."—Chicago Record Herald.

ICEBERG GROUPINGS.

Clusters and Long Lines Formed by Storms and Ocean Currents.

Among the perils and wonders of the ocean there are few more interesting things than icebergs, interesting not only by reason of their gigantic size, their fantastic shapes, their exceeding beauty, but also for the manner where-in they array themselves. Icebergs exhibit a tendency to form both clusters and long lines, and these groupings may arise from the effects both of ocean currents and of storms. Some very singular lines of bergs, extending for many hundreds of miles east of Newfoundland, have been shown on official charts issued by the government. Two of these cross each other after the crossing. In several instances parallel lines of bergs leave long spaces of clear water between them.

Curiously enough, while enormous fields of ice invade the so called "steamship lanes" of the Atlantic in the opening of spring during certain years, in other years at that season there is comparatively little ice to be seen. The ice comes, of course, from the icebound coasts of Greenland and Labrador, where huge bergs, broken from the front of the glaciers at the point where they reach the sea, start on their long journeys toward the south, driven by the great current that flows from Baffin bay into the northern Atlantic ocean.—Harper's Weekly.

Why Stars Twinkle.

The twinkling of the stars is chiefly an effect produced in the atmosphere upon the waves of light. It is due to currents and strata of air of different densities intermingling and floating past each other, through which the light passes to the eye. It is seen much more in cold than in warm weather and nearer the horizon more than overhead. The same effect may be seen by looking out of a window over a hot radiator or a candle held on the other side of a hot stove, so that you have to look through a body of highly heated air at the candle flame. The flame will be seen to waver and quiver. In other words, the various layers of air are at different densities and in motion, hence the "twinkle."—Exchange.

ELECTRIC LIGHT is the most suitable for homes, offices, shops and other places needing lights. Electricity can be used in any quantity, large or small, thereby furnishing any required amount of light. Furthermore, electric lamps can be located in any place, thus affording any desired distribution of light.

No other lamps possess those qualifications, therefore it is not surprising that electric lamps are rapidly replacing all others in modern establishments.
