There is a growing feeling of alarm at Oregon City as to an epidemic of typhoid fever and a thorough investigation as to the cause of the malady is being made by the city council and officers of the state were reported and one death. Oregon City's water is obtained from the Willamette river, but an analysis of the water shows no trace of colon bacilli. Here in Estacada you can almost taste "colon bocilli" in the water, or something equally as bad, with, perhaps, not as big a name, but people shut their eyes and drink it down with no apparent bad results. Will some one please rap on wood?
