La Mascotte.

The mascot came to us from the French. The word is French slang and was popularized by Audran's comic opera, "La Mascotte," in 1880, though before that its use had long been common among French gamblers. And, in England, the mascot could be anything from a dog to a doughnut.—London Standard Wealth in Middle Ages.

Hallam, whose "View of the State of Europe During the Middle Ages" was published in 1818, calculated that in the latter half of the thirteenth century money had at least twenty-four or twenty-five times more purchasing power than at the beginning of the nineteenth. In Edward I's day a knight possessed "extremely rich" on £150 a year, while an annual income of between £10 and £20 was reckoned a "competent estate for a gentleman." But the gentleman of those days had few, if any, foreign luxuries, and rarely left his own country—except to fight.—London Mirror.

The Hungarian Crown.

The Hungarian crown worn at their accession by the emperors of Austria as kings of Hungary is the identical one made for Stephen and used at his coronation over 800 years ago. The whole is of pure gold, except the settings, and weighs almost exactly fourteen pounds. The settings above alluded to consist of fifty-three sapphires, fifty rubies, one emerald and 238 pearls. It will be noticed that there are no diamonds among these precious adornments. This is accounted for by the oft quoted story of Stephen's aversion to such gems because he considered them "unlucky."

Harry Reid of Garfield, who had been employed in Portland, returned last week to his home, where he will again act as chauffeur for the Samson Tractor on his father's Bannockburn Ranch.

Noble McMillan, Hugh Mendenhall and Bill Underwood of Estacada, spent four days last week near Arlington, Oregon, where they enjoyed goose and rabbit shooting, having bagged 24 geese and dozens of rabbits.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Duus, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Botkin and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Saling, were the dinner guests at the C. A. Jacques home in Lower Garfield last Saturday evening.

To Invoke the Referendum

is, that Eastern Clackamas taxpayers are farmers, who are busy on their farms, while a large percentage of the delegates from the lower end of the county, are business and professional men, many of them living in Oregon City.

The fact cannot be overlooked, that as in the past, this part of the county has suffered by not being represented and taking an active interest in vital questions. It further proves the immediate need of some organization among the taxpayers of Eastern Clackamas County, which need will soon become a reality, as a meeting will be held at Barton, Monday December 27th, at 1:30 P. M. for that purpose.

In fairness to the county at large, a decision should be made by the county voters, before the proposed purchase is consummated. A petition signed by a few hundred voters conforming to the required percentage, would invoke the referendum and bring the question up to a vote if possible, on the coming primary ballot.

If the tax payers of Eastern Clackamas do not join and get this question settled by ballot, they should have no fault to find later and should be heartily ashamed of themselves.

If the lower end of the county, by uniting with this part, would recommend that this purchase be refused and a similar amount of money expended in obtaining a centralized location for the annual county fair, the East Clackamas County Fair and its support could be joined to a real county fair, without the sectional side-shows.

Professor Visits Estacada

of their earning power, while the latter was far from it."

Such statistics as the above are beyond dispute and the boy, who today will quit school, unless it becomes necessary, is making a mistake, which he will regret the balance of his life. Also the parent, who does not see the value of higher education, should ponder on these figures.

Prof. Straub paid the Progress a call and in the short time before his train left, explained briefly the immense value to the boys of a manual training course and congratulated Estacada on having arranged for the installation of such a department.

The greatest surprise for the editor, was that Ken Bartlett and Bob Morton should be on close terms of intimacy with a professor of the College of Liberal Arts, as he had supposed that these star athletes were only on terms of intimacy with the football coach and athletic trainer.
